Medical malpractice panic stemmed

A year ago the medical malpractice crisis threatened to shut down health care in Illinois.

Warnings of physician strikes inspired by soaring medical insurance premiums grew ominous and the echo resonated from hospital corridors to the halls of the state legislature.

For the public, the uproar was translated into ballooning health care costs.

But the picture has changed. Doctors and hospitals have struck back at the malpractice malaise, and their actions have brought victories that have turned back the panic that flooded onto the health field 18 months ago.

THE HERALD'S three-month study of medical malpractice in the Northwest suburbs shows:

- Lawsuits against area hospitals have dropped 50 per cent from 1975; malpractice suits have declined 30 per cent over all in Cook County since June.
- While millions of dollars are being sought from area hospitals, judgments are rare and those which are awarded give comparatively small sums.
- A branch of Cook County Circuit Court created last year to deal with malpractice lawsuits hasreducedby nearly two-thirds the backlog of more than 3,000 malpractice suits pending in 1975, in part because of the aggressive efforts of Judge David A. Canel, the division's presiding judge.
- While frivolous suits continue, the volume has declined from an average of 150 cases per month to 40 per month.
- Of the cases filed, only 5 per cent reach a jury; half are dismissed outright, and another 45 per cent are settled out of court.
- Most out-of-court settlements are based not on merit but on economics as hospitals and doctors settle to avoid costly court action.
- Of the cases which go to a jury, nine of 10 are decided in favor of the doctor.
- Two Northwest suburban hospitals have moved to establish their own insurance companies in Bermuda to curb the rising costs of multi-million dollar malpractice premiums.

The malpractice crisis mushroomed almost overnight in 1975 when hospitals and doctors were slapped with huge increases in malpractice insurance premiums. Insurance companies, citing a raise in the number and amount of judgments being awarded against physicians, increased 1975 premiums to as much as five times the 1974 rate.

FOR THE four Northwest suburban hospitals, the increases were staggering:

- Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge, which had paid $2 miliion in premiums for the seven-year period between 1969 and 1976, paid a $1.3 million premium last year and this year faced a $2.5 million premium. The costs mean $5.45 of the daily patient room rate is going to malpractice coverage.
- Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights, had paid $475,000 for malpractice coverage in 1974. The premium jumped to $1.2 million in 1975 and $1.8 million this year. For patients, the premium means $10 of the daily room rate is going for malpractice insurance.
- Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village, which paid $133,000 for malpractice coverage in 1975, paid $1,081,000 for the same coverage in 1976 and faces a $1.6 million premium next year. For patients, that means $9.19 per day goes to malpractice to-

3-month study reveals changes

An astonishing rise in the cost of medical malpractice insurance, a landslide of lawsuits against physicians and the unprecedented call by some doctors to strike focused overnight attention last year on what had come to be known as the malpractice crisis.

Since then, however, a series of events has started to stem the malpractice tide. The Herald's health reporter Kurt Baer and investigative reporter Toni Ginnetti spent three months researching the factors that have added a new dimension to the one-time crisis.

The pair examined court records and interviewed physicians, hospital administrators, lawyers and court officials to document this second look at patient-doctor confrontation. Their findings will be disclosed in a series which starts today.

Residents seek removal of ugly industrial park

by NANCY GOTLER

From the street it is hard to tell whether the buildings are occupied. Time has stripped many of paint and left windows grimy and yellow.

The industrial park, southeast of Northwest Highway and Kensington Road, was built in Arlington Heights 50 years ago on an isolated four-block area north of the railroad tracks. Today it borders an expensive residential neighborhood and some angry homeowners want the businesses cleaned up or moved.

"I would strongly recommend that the town come up with a proposal to help relocate the businesses," said Daniel Lesniak, who three weeks ago moved his family from New York to 211 N. Hickory Ave., less than a block from the industrial center.

"A move would benefit the village and the companies, which could look for newer buildings," he said. "In many towns the area would already have been condemned. It's a disgrace to the entire village."

BUSINESSES IN the industrial area, bordered by E. Northwest Highway, E. Kensington Road, Hickory Avenue and E. Miner Street, have not violated local codes, Village Building Director Martin Munson said.

"It's an old area that doesn't conform to today's codes and is exempt because the buildings predate the current ordinances," Munson said. "I don't know of any unsafe conditions and haven't had any complaints about the area.

"Today there are requirements for new industrial areas, like landscaping," he said. "But if there isn't any room for landscaping, you can't do any. If that land was built on today what's there couldn't happen."

Lesniak said he bought his house because "it was a matter of economics. The trucks are very distracting and it's noisy at night. But houses in this area don't get the price they would if they were in another location because of that."

One two story brick home a block from the industrial area has been for sale since June. Its owner, who asked not to be named, said the location has kept the house on the market.

"THERE'S NO DOUBT that the location will cost us money when we finally do sell," she said. "When we bought the house 10 years ago the builder promised us the industry was

I knew adverse effects of Nixon pardon: Ford

NEW YORK (UPI) — President Ford knew before he pardoned former President Richard M. Nixon that the action would have a "very adverse effect" on his political fortunes, according to an interview released Sunday.

The interview, with Barbara Walters of ABC News, will be televised Jan. 2. In it, Ford discussed the pardon, his campaign strategy against Jimmy Carter, which he defended, and his running mate, Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., whom he refused to blame for the defeat.

Ford said he issued the pardon not because Nixon was ill, but because "controversy day after day after day" over the former President was distracting him and the nation from more important problems that had to be solved" — a point he made during the campaign.

"LAWYERS WERE coming into my office, my counselors, and saying, 'We have this problem with the courts,' or, 'We have this problem with the Congress about what to do with the Nixon papers.'

"I was spending at least 25 per cent of my time listening to legal arguments about what we should do with the Nixon papers at a time when I should have been working 100 per cent of the time on the war in Vietnam and the problems of the economy, and that is the only reason that I really made the decision."

Ford said he told his wife Betty after deciding to pardon Nixon, "This will have a very adverse political impact."

"I just decided that regardless of the political consequence that I would do what I thought was right," Ford said. Asked whether Nixon ever said to him anything like, "I know this must have cost you a great deal," Ford replied, "Not that I recollect, no. He, as I recall, thanked me but other than that we have not discussed it."

Ford said he has talked with Nixon by phone "maybe six to eight times" over the past 2½ years.

"I DON'T SEE anything wrong with that," Ford said. "He was a man who had spent a good part of his life in government; he had been, I think, very successful in foreign policy. He had known the political situation. He has been a friend of mine."

Immediately after he won the GOP nomination, Ford said his advisers told him, "we had to change 150,000 voters a day in the next 70-some days

Miami area hotel strike spreads to 4 more inns

MAIMAI BEACH (UPI) — An estimated 5,000 Christmas holiday tourists on Miami Beach's "gold coast" were forced Sunday to hustle their own baggage, eat mess-hall style meals and make their own beds in $80 a day rooms, thanks to a spreading strike of the employes.

The strike spread Sunday to three more luxury hotels in Miami Beach and one in Miami, idling about 4,000 workers.

Picket lines went up at the Deauville, Carillon and Eden Roc hotels on Miami Beach and the Doral Country Club hotel, west of Miami International Airport. The strike went into its second day at the country club's sister hostelry on Miami Beach, the Doral Beach, and The Shelborne hotel.

A STRIKE at Miami Beache's Kanover hotel was settled after eight hours on Christmas Day.

Dennis Meehan, vice president of Local 355, Hotel and Restaurant Employes and Bartenders Union, said, "It is a distinct possibility that the strike will spread to other hotels."

To soothe the sting, the hotels stopped charging their guests for the buffet style breakfasts.

The strike followed more than four months of negotiations in which the hotels and union agreed on wages and most fringe benefits. The talks broke down Friday on the question of a union demand for a mandatory $1 a day tip for hotel maids from each person occupying a hotel room.

Edwin Dean, executive director of the South Florida Hotel and Motel Assn., the bargaining agent for 36 major resort hotels, said the association balked at the mandatory tips for maids because it would have the effect of raising the daily room rate.

Dean said no meetings were scheduled with the union and he has heard nothing from a federal mediator since the strike began.

"THE UNION has tried very hard to hurt us and hurt us badly because of the holiday, and there is resentment on the part of some hotel owners as a result of this action," Dean said. "I think it would be inappropriate for me to initiate any meetings with the union. I am here in my office and no one has come near me."

Dean insisted that the hotel guests "are taking it fine. I have no reports of any early checkouts due to the strike, or cancellation of advance reservations. The hotels have inaugurated a policy of a complimentary buffet breakfast."

Meehan said five major hotels have come to terms with the union. In addition to the Konover (formerly the Playboy Plaza), these included Miami's Everglades (operated by Braniff Airways), two Holiday Inn resort motels on Miami Beach and the Montmarte on Miami Beach.

PICKETS WATCH in the background as Dade County officials erect no parking signs near the Doral Country Club, apparently to make parking more difficult for striking members of the hotel's union.

Landers Chalet ruined by Christmas Day fire

Elk Grove Village and Mount Prospect fire inspectors are investigating the cause of a Christmas morning blaze which destroyed Landers Chalet Restaurant and Lounge, 1916 E. Higgins Rd., Elk Grove Village.

The fire, which broke out shortly before 3 a.m., took fire crews from Elk Grove Village and Mount Prospect three hours to get under control. Mount Prospect Fire Officer Lonnie Jackson said Sunday the blaze completely gutted the first half of the structure and produced so much heat and smoke that a steel joist roof collapsed.

No damage estimate was available Sunday, but Jackson said, "They'll be out of business for quite a while." Select pieces of fire evidence have been forwarded to the Cook County fire laboratories in an effort to determine the cause of the fire.

Landers Chalet had a garbage fire about two months ago which was quickly extinguished by fire personnel.

20-yr.-old Mao China speech woes printed

HONG KONG (UPI) — China published Sunday a 20-year-old speech by the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung arguing the way to deal with counter-revolutionaries was "killing none and arresting few."

"In clearing out counter-revolutionaries in party and government organs, schools and army units, we must adhere to the policy started in Yenan of 'killing none and arresting few,' " Mao said in the 1956 speech.

The speech, never before published in full, dealt with "10 problems" then facing China — essentially the same problems now facing Mao's successor, Hua Kuo-feng.

THE PORTION on "counter-revolutionaries" was particularly applicable today because Mao's widow, Chiang Ching, and three other radicals were arrested last October on charges of counter-revolutionary activities.

Peking Radio, the Communist party newspaper and the official New China News Agency gave the speech wide dissemination Sunday, which would have been Mao's 83rd birthday.

Mao made it clear he was not opposed to capital punishment — defending the mass executions in 1951-1952 shortly after the Communist takeover — but stressed only the worst counter-revolutionaries should be executed.

"True, we executed a number of people during the above-mentioned campaign to suppress counter-revolutionaries. But what sort of people were they? They were counter-revolutionaries who owed the masses many blood debts and were bitterly hated by them.

"A small number should be executed," he said, but basically China should follow the Yenan policy that "there should be fewer arrests and executions in the suppression of counter-revolutionaries."

YENAN WAS the revolutionary base of Mao and the main party organization from the mid-1930's until the late 1940's.

"Well over 90 out of every 100 counter-revolutionaries should be dealt with in this way. This is what we mean be 'arresting few.' As for executions, kill none."

That apparently is the procedure being followed in China today. A special commission is investigating the "crimes" of Chiang Ching and the three others and is expected to report to party leaders early in 1977.

The remainder of Mao's speech focused on nine other problems facing China then and now — including relationships between industry and agriculture, central and regional authority, party and nonparty elements, Chinese and minority groups, and China and other countries.

The speech, never before published in full, dealt with "10 problems" then facing China — essentially the same problems now facing Mao's successor, Hua Kuo-feng.

THE PORTION on "counter-revolutionaries" was particularly applicable today because Mao's widow, Chiang Ching, and three other radicals were arrested last October on charges of counter-revolutionary activities.

Peking Radio, the Communist party newspaper and the official New China News Agency gave the speech wide dissemination Sunday, which would have been Mao's 83rd birthday.

Mao made it clear he was not opposed to capital punishment — defending the mass executions in 1951-1952 shortly after the Communist takeover — but stressed only the worst counter-revolutionaries should be executed.

"True, we executed a number of people during the above-mentioned campaign to suppress counter-revolutionaries. But what sort of people were they? They were counter-revolutionaries who owed the masses many blood debts and were bitterly hated by them.

"A small number should be executed," he said, but basically China should follow the Yenan policy that "there should be fewer arrests and executions in the suppression of counter-revolutionaries."

YENAN WAS the revolutionary base of Mao and the main party organization from the mid-1930's until the late 1940's.

"Well over 90 out of every 100 counter-revolutionaries should be dealt with in this way. This is what we mean be 'arresting few.' As for executions, kill none."

That apparently is the procedure being followed in China today. A special commission is investigating the "crimes" of Chiang Ching and the three others and is expected to report to party leaders early in 1977.

The remainder of Mao's speech focused on nine other problems facing China then and now — including relationships between industry and agriculture, central and regional authority, party and nonparty elements, Chinese and minority groups, and China and other countries.

Foster parents share their good lives

by LUISA GINNETTI

Being a foster parent is no part-time job. Jim and Mary Koblas and Norman and Claire Cullerton know the commitment and the challenge of opening their hearts and homes to children who are not their own.

It is a responsibility they view not as a sacrifice but rather a routine part of their lives.

The Koblases and Cullertons are among 17 families who volunteer to work with Shelter, Inc. as foster parents, providing short-term care for Northwest suburban children experiencing family problems.

Why do couples decide to become foster parents? For the Cullertons and Koblases, both of Arlington Heights, the decision was not as difficult as some might think.

"WE HAVE HAD a good life and we wanted to do something for others," Jim Koblas said. "It feels good to do something for others."

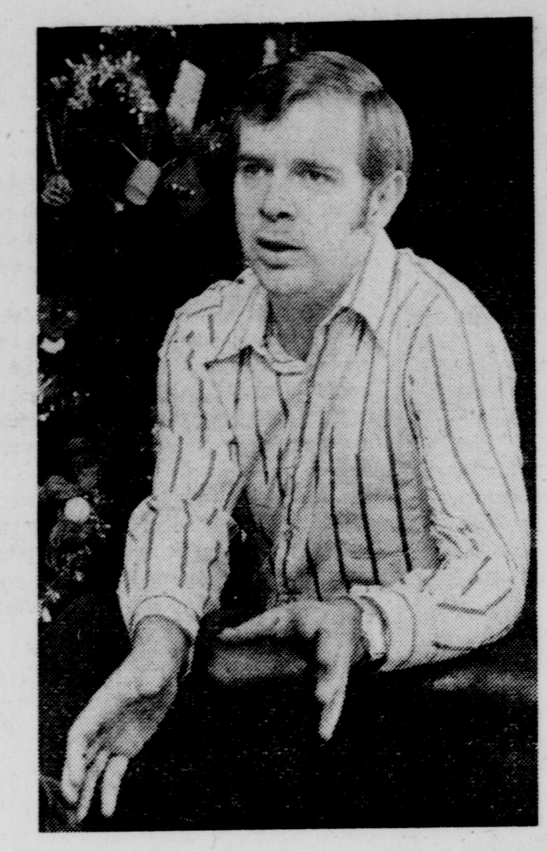
"I was working with Shelter for awhile as a volunteer and I became convinced that it was a good and needed program," Mrs. Cullerton said. "It was a 'help your neighbor' idea. Like anything you're about to do, taking the first step is the hardest part," she said.

The Cullertons and Koblases agree the commitment to become a foster parent is one that must be made by the entire family and not just the parents.

"We discussed it as a family and our children (two boys aged 11 and 9 and a girl aged 5) were interviewed separately by Shelter," Mrs. Koblas said. "We're super proud of our kids for coming through. They show a lot of care and love."

MRS. KOBLAS said many times her children are more responsible for making a foster child feel at home because they are the ones spending the most time with the child. The Koblases prefer to have children under the age of 11 because they are likely to be more compatible with their own children.

"We thought it might be harder to relate to teenagers because we haven't gone through that stage," Koblas said. "It's a matter of relating to a child at a particular age and I think you need some inside experience with it."



Mary and Jim Koblas wanted to help others. They became foster parents.

The Cullertons, however deal only with teen-agers. "We are among the older foster parents," Mrs. Cullerton, 47, said, "and I think sometimes it's harder to place teen-agers."

She said her two daughters, aged 25 and 19, also have been very helpful in the program. "Our children have been a great source of help even though the foster children are usually younger than they."

SINCE JOINING Shelter in March, the Koblases have had seven foster children ranging in age from 7 days to 15 years. Each experience is different, the couple agrees, and each is rewarding. "You do become slightly attached to each child," Koblas said.

Mrs. Koblas said she has mixed emotions when a child leaves. "You wonder what will happen after they leave here and what their future is," she said.

Mrs. Cullerton said parting with the children is always "bittersweet" but she adds that at least half of those whom they have cared for keep in touch with the Cullertons. "But the constant separations wear on you sometimes," she added.

Both couples said that for the most part they have had all good experiences with foster children.

MOST PEOPLE have a misconception of what the program involves, the couples said. No delinquent or problem children are placed through Shelter. The organization is concerned only with finding temporary homes for children from boken homes or children whose parents are unable to care for them.

"You have to learn to make the child feel like he's part of the family," Norman Cullerton said. "You can't make them feel like they're guests."

"Sometimes they come in with just the shirts on their back," Mrs. Koblas said. Volunteer foster parents with Shelter are not paid for their services and provide all the care and pay for expenses out of their own pockets.

"We haven't felt an expense," Koblas said. "It doesn't make any difference to put an extra potato in the pot," the 32-year-old Eastern Airlines pilot said.

THE CULLERTONS and Koblases agree the most rewarding part of being a foster parent is seeing the development and growth of their own children.

"It's rewarding in the sense that we see our children in the act of giving," Mrs. Cullerton said. "Both our children have extended themselves to the kids and they've grown up the way we wanted them to."

"My oldest boy came up to me the other day and said 'Mom, I love you and I'm glad you love me and I'm really glad you're here,' " Mrs. Koblas said.

Both couples said they plan to continue being foster parents and hope more couples in the area will join Shelter. "There's such a waste of talent among older couples who have experience (in raising children) that can be used," Mrs. Cullerton said.

"Sometimes we think when our children are grown we will stop but then maybe that's the time to have foster children," Mrs. Koblas said.

Jim Koblas added his own thoughts. "We'll be doing it until we're not doing it."

Carter vow for new faces in cabinet not realized

by HELEN THOMAS

News Analysis

PLAINS, Ga. (UPI) — President-elect Jimmy Carter, who promised to appoint "new faces," instead has selected a Cabinet that is conspicuously moderate, experienced and middle-aged.

Frequently during the campaign he objected to the "political and economic elite . . . who have run the country over the past 20 years." Carter said it would be his "inclination to go to a new generation."

When it came time to choose his Cabinet, Carter fell back on eight who served in other administrations. There are two women — one of them black — and three Georgians, one of them black, at the Cabinet level. Most are highly educated. Their average age is 49.

CARTER TAKES issue with those who believe that he played it safe, relying on "Washington insiders."

Carter said on several occasions that in picking his Cabinet, he looked above all for good managers and, particularly, men and women with whom he is compatible. Some reports say Carter did not get along too well with some of the big names who were summoned for interviews.

For those who expected more blacks, more women and a younger crop of leaders, this Cabinet did not stack up.

CARTER SAID he applied the same criteria to appointees regardless of race and sex, although he admits that discrimination against blacks and women in top government positions prevented them from racking up impressive management credentials.

However, Carter says he has ordered his Cabinet officials to make special efforts to get blacks and women in assistant and undersecretary jobs.

As Carter sees it, each official will have great independence in running his or her department, but he will be the policy maker. That gave an advantage to the team player, the "technocrat."

Although he denies there was any pressure, Carter undoubtedly was influenced by some of the voting groups who supported him. There were compromises and disappointments and undoubtedly some appeasement of the various interests who had a stake in his election.

AT A GLANCE, Carter's Cabinet is in the middle of the road. The stronger liberal and conservative voices are present, such as energy assistant James R. Schlesinger, a self-styled Taft Republican, and U.N. ambassador-designate Andrew Young, a congressman who warked for many civil rights groups.

Clearly the economic policies will not reflect the laissez-faire conservatism of the Ford administration, where Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors, and Treasury Sec. William Simon prevailed.

Instead, Carter budget director Thomas B. Lance; Charles Schultze, his successor to Greenspan, and W. Michael Blumenthal replacing Simon at Treasury were expected to reject wage-price controls, but to advocate a tax cut and a jobs program to combat the economic slump.

IN FOREIGN policy, Carter said a strong, independent secretary of state like Henry H. Kissinger "will never happen." Secretary-designate Cyrus R. Vance, served as deputy secretary of defense and a diplomatic troubleshooter in the Kennedy and Johnson administrations.

Vance says shuttle diplomacy is not his cup of tea and that he will leave those negotiations to aides. He is expected to defer to Carter in broad policy making.

Carter will have in the White House with him Columbia University professor Zbigiew Brzezinski as his national security adviser. Brzezinski wants to remodel detente, saying it now gives the Soviet Union unfair advantage.

THE NEW DEFENSE secretary, Harold Brown, was Pentagon weapons chief and Air Force secretary during the Lyndon B. Johnson era. He has come full circle, from a hawk on the Vietnam War to a man who indicates that he strongly supports arms control.

His appointment of former Federal judge Griffin Bell, a Georgia friend, is his most controversial, drawing criticism from civil rights leaders. The naming of lawyer Patricia Roberts Harris, who is black, as Secretary of Housing and Urban Development did not sit well with housing experts or blacks who feel she is not qualified in that field.

In addition to Vance, Schlesinger and Brown, others with previous service are Joseph Califano, named Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, a former Johnson domestic adviser; Ted Sorenson, the CIA director who was John F. Kennedy's chief speech writer; Harris, ambassador to Luxembourg under Johnson; Schultze, budget director under Johnson, and Blumenthal, international trade negotiator under Kennedy.

Two others are congressmen, Reps. Brock Adams, D-Wash. to be Transportation Secretary and Rep. Bob Bergland, D-Minn. to be Secretary of Agriculture.

The newcomers are Gov. Cecil Andrus of Idaho to be Secretary of Interior and Ray Marshall, economics professor at the University of Texas to be Secretary of Labor.

Israel's Katzir begins forming government

JERUSALEM (UPI) — President Ephraim Katzir Sunday began the formality of trying to form a new government because of the resignation of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, but sources expect Rabin to head an interim government until new elections.

Katzir met with a delegation from the ruling Labor Party delegation — the first of a round of talks on forming a new government required by Israeli law following the resignation of a prime minister.

But that law is bypassed if the Knesset dissolves itself and puts Rabin in charge of a caretaker government until new elections, a move that political sources said the parliament will make within two weeks.

LABOR AND oppositions leaders already are conferring on a date for elections. Likud opposition leaders have proposed elections on May 3 and Labor leaders have suggested a May 31 date.

Katzir's meetings Sunday with the ruling Labor Party delegation were the first of 10 such sessions he scheduled for this week with representatives from all parliamentary factions.

Afterwards Katzir is required to ask a faction to form a new government, but political sources said they expect the law dissolving parliament and setting a new election date will be passed by then.

IF NOT, the sources said, Katzir probably will ask Rabin to form a new government, a task he has up to 42 days to carry out.

Labor Minister Moshe Baram, who headed the Labor delegation that met with Katzir for 90 minutes Sunday, said later he expects the Knesset to set a new election date and pass a law dissolving parliament quite soon.

If there is a delay, Bar-Am suggested Katzir chose Rabin to form a new government.

Labor party sources said they are eager for a swift passage of the law dissolving parliament because delays would increase the chances an opposition party could be asked to form the new government.

Michigan's Sen. Hart dead at 64

• Sen. Philip A. Hart, the slight, softspoken man with a voice loud enough to lead the battle for an end to bigotry and a reputation large enough to be known as "the conscience of the Senate," died Sunday at his Washington home. He was 64. A Democrat, Hart did not seek reelection in 1976 because his body had been racked by cancer. Funeral services are scheduled for Tuesday. Burial is expected to be on Mackinac Island, his home in Michigan. He was at the forefront of debates on global issues of war and peace. But his quiet work on behalf of oppressed minorities, hungry school children, consumers and nature lovers left his mark on American society.

• President Ford abandoned the ski slopes Sunday to watch football on television, but unexpected static on his TV screen temporarily fouled up his plans. An electrical power failure outside Vail, Colo. knocked out cable television reception at his mountain resort at midmorning, forcing Ford and other viewers to miss the first quarter of the National Football Conference championship game between the Minnesota Vikings and Los Angeles Rams.

• President-elect Jimmy Carter told his Bible class Sunday that his mother had a "good Christmas" but still has a muscular spasm in her left leg that hurts when she walks. Seventy-eight-year-old "Miss Lillian" was admitted to the hospital Wednesday after feeling a sharp pain in her leg. She has a history of phlebitis and arthritis. Her doctor told reporters Miss Lillian overtaxed herself during the campaign and needs rest.

• Condemned killer Gary Gilmore spent the holiday weekend in solitary confinement with only a business discussion to break the monotony, his lawyer said Sunday. "He's not quite in the Christmas Spirit," attorney Robert Moody said. "But his spirits and attitude are good for someone in his position." Gilmore was convicted of shooting to death a young motel clerk during a petty robbery last summer.

• Pope Paul VI wound up a busy and taxing Christmas week with a call Sunday to defend the family against "evils" that would threaten its stability. In a blessing to a crowd of thousands gathered at St. Peter's Square, the 79-year-old pontiff observed the Roman Catholic Festival of the Holy Family by calling for renewed commitment to the Christian family. The blessing was the latest in a busy week highlighted by a glittering Christmas midnight mass in St. Peter's Basilica. In his Christmas day message, the pontiff called for a new Christian humanism that transcends the human improvements made possible by modern-day scientific and social progress.

• Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi. appearing Sunday on "Meet the Press" said he favors return of the death penalty in some situations because "I think it is a necessary deterrent." Soviet-U.S. grain deal good sense: Bergland

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Agriculture Secretary-designate Bob Bergland, who will be taking office in the first year of a five-year Soviet-American grain agreement negotiated by the Ford administration, says he views the deal as "good sense."

Bergland added in a recent interview that the Carter administration intends to avoid the "rather emotional reaction" which produced several temporary embargoes on grain exports to Russia and other countries before the long-term grain deal was negotiated in the fall of 1975.

Under the agreement, Soviet officials are committed to buying at least 6 million metric tons of American grain annually during the five years which began last Oct. 1.

PURCHASES CAN go up to 8 million tons annually at the option of the Russians, and can top that level if Soviet authorities first consult with American government officials.

The deal includes an escape clause to protect American consumers in years of short supply. U.S. officials can reduce the amount the Soviets purchase from private American grain traders if U.S. grain supplies fall below 225 million tons — far below the current season's level of 283.2 million tons.

Soviet purchases of American grain reached 15 million tons in the 1975-76 season, endng last Sept. 30, before the new agreement came into effect. For the 1976-77 season, purchases stand at about 6.5 million tons and officials have doubted that the total will go much higher because Russian farmers harvested a record grain crop this year.

The blessing was the latest in a busy week highlighted by a glittering Christmas midnight mass in St. Peter's Basilica. In his Christmas day message, the pontiff called for a new Christian humanism that transcends the human improvements made possible by modern-day scientific and social progress.

• Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi. appearing Sunday on "Meet the Press" said he favors return of the death penalty in some situations because "I think it is a necessary deterrent." He said he was certainly not in favor of the death penalty in the U.S. if we're going to have a flamboyant macabre . . . everytime an execution is scheduled."

IN A REENACTMENT of the "Battle of Trenton," Hessian troops pass the reviewing stand after their surrender to troops from Gen. Soviet-U.S. grain deal good sense: Bergland

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Agriculture Secretary-designate Bob Bergland, who will be taking office in the first year of a five-year Soviet-American grain agreement negotiated by the Ford administration, says he views the deal as "good sense."

Bergland added in a recent interview that the Carter administration intends to avoid the "rather emotional reaction" which produced several temporary embargoes on grain exports to Russia and other countries before the long-term grain deal was negotiated in the fall of 1975.

Under the agreement, Soviet officials are committed to buying at least 6 million metric tons of American grain annually during the five years which began last Oct. 1.

PURCHASES CAN go up to 8 million tons annually at the option of the Russians, and can top that level if Soviet authorities first consult with American government officials.

The deal includes an escape clause to protect American consumers in years of short supply. U.S. officials can reduce the amount the Soviets purchase from private American grain traders if U.S. grain supplies fall below 225 million tons — far below the current season's level of 283.2 million tons.

Soviet purchases of American grain reached 15 million tons in the 1975-76 season, endng last Sept. 30, before the new agreement came into effect. For the 1976-77 season, purchases stand at about 6.5 million tons and officials have doubted that the total will go much higher because Russian farmers harvested a record grain crop this year.

Inmates evacuated at Lake Co. jail

Twenty-nine inmates were evacuated from the Lake County Jail in Waukegan Sunday when an inmate set fire to a mattress, sending smoke throughout two second floor cellblocks. The inmates were evacuated from the cellblocks to another area of the jail where they were held under guard until they could be returned to their cells. One jailer was treated for smoke inhalation, a fire department official said. The fire caused some smoke damage.

Chicago-bound train derails

An Amtrak passenger train enroute from Philadelphia to Chicago derailed in Downingtown, Pa. Sunday night, injuring at least 12 persons. A spokeswoman for Amtrak said four cars of the five-car train, the Broadway Limited, derailed at 6:27 p.m. It had departed Philadelphia at 5:48 p.m. The injured were taken to area hospitals but the extent of their injuries was undetermined immediately. The spokeswoman said each car was carrying 40 to 60 passengers. The derailment downed power lines on the tracks, knocking out all train service between Philadelphia and Harrisburg, Pa., according to the spokeswoman.

'Agencies do not inform public'

Citizens watchdog groups are playing an increasing role in satisfying the people's right to know, although government agencies have shown a "growing reluctance" to cooperate with them, a Chicago-based national study indicated Sunday. "There is apparently a continuing and growing reluctance on the part of government agencies to share what is, in fact, public information with the citizen's groups, which results in a need to do time consuming and expensive primary or secondary research," said Dean Andrew Bavas of the University of Illinois' College of Urban Sciences. "There also is evidence that a practice has developed of providing information and records in forms that are either difficult or impossible to use when it is made available. This provides a good indication as to why the organizations have developed close working relationships with the media, in particular the print media. Clearly, joint investigative research and reporting are called for." Based on the three-year study which included a survey of nearly 500 newspaper editors, Bavas said watchdog organizations have been unsuccessful in establishing close working relationships with state and local government agencies.

4 killed in Downstate crash

One of the nation's worst holiday traffic accidents occurred in Downstate Illinois early Sunday killing four persons. Two cars collided on a highway at the edge of the Southern Illinois town of Maryville. Nationwide traffic deaths Sunday night mounted toward 400 as travelers began the trek home from Christmas jaunts. Holiday deaths nationwide in traffic accidents reached 339. Deaths over the holidays from fires reached 80 and plane crashes claimed 9 lives. Texas recorded 29 traffic deaths, California had 24, North Carolina had 19 and Illinois, Georgia, Louisiana and Ohio recorded 15 traffic deaths each. In one of the worst plane crashes, three members of a Missouri family flying to visit relatives at Fort Wayne, Ind., were killed Christmas night when their small airplane nosedived into a plowed field a mile east of Columbia City, Mo.

Med school enrollment up 4%

Medical school enrollment in the United States increased about 4 per cent in 1975-76 over the previous year, the Journal of The American Medical Assn. reported Sunday. Enrollment at the 114 medical schools totaled 56,244 an increase of 2,170 over the 1974-75 school year. First-year enrollment increased 388, to 15,351, in that period and the number of graduates increased from 12,714 to 13,561. The Chicago-based journal reported enrollment of women increased more than 10 per cent, with 11,527 female enrollees in the 1975-76 school year. Enrollment of ethnic minorities reached 4,595 last year, 8.2 per cent of the total enrollment. For the first time in years, however, the number of applicants to medical schools declined. The new enrollees were selected from 42,303 applicants, 321 fewer than in the 1974-75 school year. The journal reported that applicants applied to an average of nine schools each.

Lake Zurich ambulances ruined by fire

Lake Zurich's paramedics were back in business Sunday afternoon after a Christmas Day blaze which destroyed one village ambulance and severely damaged two others.

Lake Zurich Fire Chief John Schwada said Sunday that two of the mobile intensive-care units have been replaced and mutual aid agreements with neighboring communities should cover any additional emergency needs.

Lake Zurich volunteer firemen were called to the municipal ambulance garage, 61 W. Main St., about 2:45 p.m. Saturday where a small blaze in one ambulance was quickly extinguished, Schwada said.

THE ACTUAL fire wasn't too bad, but the fire, heat and smoke ruined one unit. The heat and smoke also damaged equipment on the other two ambulances," he added.

One ambulance was replaced immediately by using equipment carried in the fire chief's station wagon.

One Buffalo Grove Fire Dept. ambulance was sent to Lake Zurich until another ambulance unit could be obtained by Lake Zurich officials.

Schwada said the loss, which was covered by insurance, totaled $75,000 for the equipment and $10,000 for the garage in back of the Lake Zurich Village Hall.

EMERGENCY SERVICES in Lake Zurich cover an estimated 15,000 persons, Schwada said.

The municipal ambulance service, originally under the police department, is now a separate village branch not affiliated with the fire department, Schwada said.

Ambulance Chief William Cochran was unavailable for comment.

if we were going to win."

He said he approached the campaign "from the point of view that we weren't going to win and that we weren't going to be disappointed if we didn't."

However, Ford said, the fact that "we got very close" later in the campaign caused his expectations to "get a little higher than were justified."

Ford denied that Dole, the vice-presidential candidate, hurt the ticket.

"If you look at the states we won, they were primarily from the Mississippi west," he said, "and those were the states that I think Sen. Dole had an impact on."

Asked whether Dole was assigned to be the "hatchet man," as Democrats charged, Ford said, "I don't think Bob Dole and myself in our conversations to his role ever used the term 'hatchet man.' "

FORD OBSERVED that Dole had made "stronger statements" than he did, but that was in accordance with past political practice by both parties that "vice presidential candidates traditionally are a little more vigorous or foreceful or strident than the presidential candidates."

Ford also said:

- He does not "anticipate" ever running for national office again.
- He considers himself the head of the Republican party and hopes "to make a contribution in that regard.
- He was not depressed, although "We didn't, you know, go out and celebrate my defeat."
- There was absolutely "no animosity" in his post-election meeting with Carter at the White House. "The truth is," he said, "we were friendly. I think we liked one another."

College get-together at Parish Tuesday

A holiday coffeehouse will be sponsored at St. Thomas of Villanova School, 1141 E. Anderson, Palatine, to enable students home from college to meet friends and share experiences. The coffeehouse is sponsored jointly by the Harper College Campus Ministry and the St. Thomas Parish.

The coffeehouse will be from 8 p.m. to midnight Tuesday, and young adults ages 19 through 29, working or in school, are invited. Singer Mark Dorrah will play country, blues and folk music. Classical guitarist Raoul Malebranche will present selections from works by Mozart, Bach, Tchaikovsky and other 19th Century composers.

Texas apartment complex locks doors, drops drawers

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Clothes. Residents of the 18-unit Canyon Villa Apartments can take them or leave them. Most leave them.

And in February, clothing will become optional at the 78-unit Manor Villa, another complex owned by the same operators.

Terry Parker, 32, opened the nude-living Canyon Villa complex in June. It was half occupied and losing money, but six months after it dropped its drawers and locked the gate, the complex is full.

PARKER SAYS he hopes clothing-optional will spread to whole subdivisions of individual homes. He sees clothing-optional as a personal freedom.

"It allows people to be friendlier," he said. "Everybody has been conditioned so heavily that they can't imagine life without it."

The concept has worked well in the complex, Parker said, and there have been no disturbances.

"In the first few weeks, neighborhood kids tried to peek in through the gate, but after the novelty wore off, so what?" he said.

"NOBODY IS made to feel uncomfortable, but everybody eventually ends up swimming in the nude or something like that," the former Jehovah's Witness minister said.

"It goes beyond that, too, to the little things. If you have to go outside for a second, you can go out the door without anything on and not stop to put anything on."

Parker does not refer to the dwellings as "nudist apartments" because he said nudists have strict restrictions against touching among the residents.

"Nudists are just exchanging one set of rigid controls for another," he said. "When we have a party here people do whatever they always do at parties."

temporary. But because of the noise and unsightliness, we're moving."

Most merchants and employes in the area contend the condition of the area is not as poor as some residents say.

"The area has changed drastically for the better in the past three years," said Robert Heller, who has owned Heller Lumber Co., 24 N. Hickory Ave., for 20 years. "I can't imagine anyone who's lived here for a while seeing anything but an improvement. Today the area looks like Windsor Castle compared to what it looked like 10 years ago."

Floyd Redeen, owner of Redeen Engraving Co., 101 N. Hickory Ave., agreed. "I've never received any complaints and can't imagine any residents complaining. As a whole, the area is kept up well," he said.

Tom Saelinger, manager of T&L Auto, 1 S. Hickory Ave., said "some buildings look pretty dilapidated" and called the area an "eyesore."

"THE OWNERS don't seem to keep up the buildings sometimes," he said. "They figure it's a business where you don't have to have a nice looking building. Our building is fair. It doesn't look that bad, but it doesn't look that good, either. Compared to the homes over there, though, which are pretty nice, the area's an eyesore."

Lesniak and others are not satisfied with some merchants' accounts of recent remodeling and painting.

"If there was a petition to get the zoning changed or force the area to clean up," Lesniak said, "I'd be the first to sign it."

'Evening of awareness' Thursday

Black charities point up need for more activism

She moved to Rolling Meadows more than a year ago, but Mylene Middleton didn't want to cut ties with the black Chicago community she left behind.

She found little in the suburbs to compare with the community groups in the city. Chicago blacks organize for better housing, improved medical care, counseling for troubled youngsters and help for senior citizens, she says, but suburban blacks are preoccupied with establishing social ties.

"That's because blacks are so vastly outnumbered in the suburbs," she says. "You feel a need to affiliate with other blacks."

But suburban blacks, she says, ought to combine social activism with social gatherings.

Brenetta Howell Barrett agrees. As executive director of the newly organized Chicago Black United Fund, she's seeking donors who will support black-oriented charities.

SO, FAR, SHE admits she hasn't had much luck. The fund — it's not related to the United Way but is organized along the same lines — will distribute only $18,500 to black-oriented charities this year, far short of its $100,000 goal.

The answer to the fund's money-raising problems may lie in the suburbs, Ms. Barrett says.

"Most suburban blacks are in a position to give comfortably," she says. "Their incomes have risen as a result of equal employment opportunities and the civil rights movement."

BUT SUBURBAN blacks also are hard to find, she says, at least until Mrs. Middleton walked into her office a month ago.

The Rolling Meadows woman heard a radio announcer speak of the Black United Fund and talked to other black residents of Georgetown Apartments about it.

"Even some of the white people I talked to were interested," Mrs. Middleton says. "One woman said she felt that most charities put up too much red tape but felt that the Black United Fund was small enough that it could really help people."

The result was a plan for "An Evening in Black Awareness" from 6 to 9 p.m. Thursday at the Georgetown clubhouse, 2800 Algonquin Rd. Mrs. Middleton mailed about 100 invitations and hopes that each guest will donate $2 to the Black United Fund.

MS. BARRETT and fund vice presidet Rodney S. Wead will describe their organization.

"We hope to get a cadre of interested people who, once they hear our story, will commit themselves to our support," Ms. Barrett says.

"We can serve the social needs of the suburban blacks," she says. "They're going to spend money on entertainment anyway, and we have good contacts with athletes and entertainers who may be available for local benefits. I think the two can be combined."

THE CHICAGO Black United Fund is one of 14 affiliated agencies in the United States. It hopes to collect a total of $1 million within five years and says it turns 80 per cent of its collections to charities.

The first beneficiaries will be the Kenwood-Oakland Community Organization, the Organization for a Better Austin and Operation Brotherhood.

Other applicants, like the Des Plaines-based Minority Information and Referral Center, will have to wait until next year, Ms. Barrett says.

temporary. But because of the noise and unsightliness, we're moving."

Most merchants and employes in the area contend the condition of the area is not as poor as some residents say.

"The area has changed drastically for the better in the past three years," said Robert Heller, who has owned Heller Lumber Co., 24 N. Hickory Ave., for 20 years. "I can't imagine anyone who's lived here for a while seeing anything but an improvement. Today the area looks like Windsor Castle compared to what it looked like 10 years ago."

Floyd Redeen, owner of Redeen Engraving Co., 101 N. Hickory Ave., agreed. "I've never received any complaints and can't imagine any residents complaining. As a whole, the area is kept up well," he said.

Tom Saelinger, manager of T&L Auto, 1 S. Hickory Ave., said "some buildings look pretty dilapidated" and called the area an "eyesore."

"THE OWNERS don't seem to keep up the buildings sometimes," he said. "They figure it's a business where you don't have to have a nice looking building. Our building is fair. It doesn't look that bad, but it doesn't look that good, either. Compared to the homes over there, though, which are pretty nice, the area's an eyesore."

Lesniak and others are not satisfied with some merchants' accounts of recent remodeling and painting.

"If there was a petition to get the zoning changed or force the area to clean up," Lesniak said, "I'd be the first to sign it."

'Evening of awareness' Thursday

Black charities point up need for more activism

She moved to Rolling Meadows more than a year ago, but Mylene Middleton didn't want to cut ties with the black Chicago community she left behind.

She found little in the suburbs to compare with the community groups in the city. Chicago blacks organize for better housing, improved medical care, counseling for troubled youngsters and help for senior citizens, she says, but suburban blacks are preoccupied with establishing social ties.

"That's because blacks are so vastly outnumbered in the suburbs," she says. "You feel a need to affiliate with other blacks."

But suburban blacks, she says, ought to combine social activism with social gatherings.

Brenetta Howell Barrett agrees. As executive director of the newly organized Chicago Black United Fund, she's seeking donors who will support black-oriented charities.

SO, FAR, SHE admits she hasn't had much luck. The fund — it's not related to the United Way but is organized along the same lines — will distribute only $18,500 to black-oriented charities this year, far short of its $100,000 goal.

The answer to the fund's money-raising problems may lie in the suburbs, Ms. Barrett says.

"Most suburban blacks are in a position to give comfortably," she says. "Their incomes have risen as a result of equal employment opportunities and the civil rights movement."

BUT SUBURBAN blacks also are hard to find, she says, at least until Mrs. Middleton walked into her office a month ago.

The Rolling Meadows woman heard a radio announcer speak of the Black United Fund and talked to other black residents of Georgetown Apartments about it.

"Even some of the white people I talked to were interested," Mrs. Middleton says. "One woman said she felt that most charities put up too much red tape but felt that the Black United Fund was small enough that it could really help people."

The result was a plan for "An Evening in Black Awareness" from 6 to 9 p.m. Thursday at the Georgetown clubhouse, 2800 Algonquin Rd. Mrs. Middleton mailed about 100 invitations and hopes that each guest will donate $2 to the Black United Fund.

MS. BARRETT and fund vice presidet Rodney S. Wead will describe their organization.

"We hope to get a cadre of interested people who, once they hear our story, will commit themselves to our support," Ms. Barrett says.

"We can serve the social needs of the suburban blacks," she says. "They're going to spend money on entertainment anyway, and we have good contacts with athletes and entertainers who may be available for local benefits. I think the two can be combined."

THE CHICAGO Black United Fund is one of 14 affiliated agencies in the United States. It hopes to collect a total of $1 million within five years and says it turns 80 per cent of its collections to charities.

The first beneficiaries will be the Kenwood-Oakland Community Organization, the Organization for a Better Austin and Operation Brotherhood.

Other applicants, like the Des Plaines-based Minority Information and Referral Center, will have to wait until next year, Ms. Barrett says.

FIREFIGHTERS LINE up bodies of victims killed in a fire which swept through a home for the elderly near St. John's, Newfoundland early Sunday, killing more than 20 residents and a guest believed to be a teen-aged girl. Police have recovered 23 bodies and expect to find more. Cause of the blaze is under investigation but officials believe it began near a propane gas tank.

Equipment blamed in ship disaster

Several survivors of a fire that sank an Egyptian ship in the Red Sea said Sunday the disaster was caused by a lack of firefighting equipment aboard. At least 95 passengers were reported missing. "I rushed searching for water-pumping machines or hoses, but found none. I emphasize that had the vessel been carrying any firefighting equipment, the blaze would have been controlled and extinguished," said Hassan Higazi, a former firefighter. The ship's captain, Mohammed Hammad, repudiated the charge. He said he used 70 cylinders of concentrated carbon dioxide but still failed to contain the fire. The 10,500-ton Patra was headed for Egypt with 400 to 500 passengers and crew — no authoritative figure was available immediately — most of them Egyptians returning from a Moslem pilgrimage to Saudi Arabia. The 23-year old ship caught fire five hours after leaving the Saudi Arabian port of Jeddah Thursday and sank early Friday about 50 miles off the Saudi coast.

Palestinians denounce killings

Palestinians Sunday denounced the assassination of a prominent member of a "rejection front" group and his wife. One Palestinian group claimed forces collaborating with "reactionary Arab regimes" may have been responsible. Unidentified gunmen entered the home of Abdel Mahab Al Tayeb, central committeeman for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, and his wife, Khaldiya Ali Khaled, both 30, killing them with 12 rounds of gunfire, a Popular Front official said. The Popular Front is regarded as the foremost group of the so-called "rejection front" radicals that oppose the Syrian-dominated Arab peace-keeping troops in Lebanon and the Arab drive for negotiations with Israel. Tayeb's wife was the sister of Leila Khaled, widely known as a participant in a number of airplane hijackings.

Pilot error cited in plane crash

Aviation authorities in Bangkok, Thailand Sunday blamed pilot error for the Christmas Day crash of an Egyptian airliner in which the pilot radioed "everything is clear" just before the plane slammed into a factory, killing perhaps as many as 100 persons. "He saw the runway and had the responsibility for landing the plane," said Gen. Surayuth Nivisabutr, Thai director of civil aviation. The crash killed at least 70 persons, including all 43 passengers — one of whom may have been an American — nine crewmembers and at least 18 workers in the textile factory. Police Maj. Gen. Chalit Boonsuwan said another 30 bodies probably were buried in the factory's wreckage. One reporter said the area was "completely putrid" from the smell of corpses decomposing under the hot tropical sun.

Wind shift eases oil spill fears

Winds shifted to the northwest Sunday and eased fears — at least temporarily — that a massive oil spill from the sunken Liberian tanker Argo Merchant would move closer to land near Nantucket, Mass. Southeast winds earlier in the day had pushed the slick two miles closer to the Nantucket shoreline, to a location about 25 miles from the island, the Coast Guard said. But Coast Guard oceanographer Joseph Deaver reported the changing wind had stalled movement of the slick. Deaver said there was still a sheen of oil coming from the wreck of the Argo Merchant and spreading four miles. After that, he said, the oil forms into patches.

Energy office may be opposed

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader said Sunday that environmental groups may oppose a single federal department for energy for fear it will give too much power to Jimmy Carter's new energy adviser, James R. Schlesinger. Nader said Schlesinger has favored breeder reactors and other forms of nuclear power and has paid little attention to such things as solar energy and energy conservation, which Nader feels are wiser courses to follow. He said Schlesinger "may change" in his new job under Carter's direction. Nader was interviewed on CBS television's "Face the Nation." Carter last week named Schlesinger, a former head of the Atomic Energy Commission and former defense secretary, to be White House advisor coordinating all energy matters. It has been widely assumed that, as part of Carter's reorganization of government, Schlesinger eventually may be placed in charge of a consolidated, cabinet-level energy department.

Probe of germ warfare urged

Sen. Richard Schweiker, R-Pa., called Sunday for a Senate investigation of germ warfare tests the Army conducted in American cities during the 1950s and 1960s. "It's incredible that these tests were ever considered, let alone conducted . . . Reports that the Army has used the American people as guinea pigs in secret, potentially deadly biological warfare tests are totally incompatible with our form of government," Schweiker said in a statement. The Army acknowledged last week that germ warfare tests were conducted in eight American cities between 1950 and 1966 — including tests at the Pentagon, in New York City subways and San Francisco. An Army spokesman said full reports on the experiments using bacteria described as "present throughout the environment" are buried in vaults in Utah and are not currently available. He said there was no proven link between the Army tests and outbreaks of disease.

Head north for winter: but think warm

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — The blizzards will howl and the thermometers will plunge far below zero but persons in the north country insist you can be comfortable and even have fun in that kind of weather.

No need to hibernate. Just be prepared for the cold and snow and enjoy it.

International Falls and Bemidji, Minn., often run a close race to be ice box of the nation, with temperatures falling to 40 below zero or colder. Minneapolis and St. Paul in southern Minnesota are milder, with coldest temperatures more like 20-30 below.

But residents keep moving and don't even slow up much.

A NEW YORK newspaperman wrote years ago that Minnesota in winter was "unfit for human habitation." Angry St. Paul citizens started an annual Winter Carnival filled with outdoor festivities to prove winters are fun.

Thousands of persons in the north race over the snowy countryside on snowmobiles at 40-50 miles an hour in the winter, and skate and ski down hills or cross country.

The ardent fisherman heads for a lake with a fish shack behind his car and chisel in hand, ready to cut through two or three feet of ice in search of anything with fins. Families even go to the parks for picnics in the snow.

"The secret," various authorities say, "is to be prepared."

There are all sorts of good tips for this, like the old mountaineer saying:

"If your feet get cold, put on your hat."

WHEN THE TEMPERATURE is around zero, most body heat escapes through the top of the head like a chimney. Heavy wool stocking, fur and down caps are ideal. Goose down jackets, snowmobil suits and insulated mittens and boots also are big sellers.

Towns in the far north sink water mains at least eight feet below ground level to escape frost. Even then there's no guarantee. Once at Bemidji, the frost went down 12 feet.

Motorists in the far north fill car radiators with almost pure antifreeze, protecting them from temperatures down to 80 below.

Many drivers install electrically operated tank heaters in their motors to keep oil and engine blocks warm. Occasionally a motorist has tried to thaw his engine by building a wood fire under it, but fire departments frown greatly on the practice.

Motorists sometimes get free parking in far north communities because the meters freeze up.

City, county and state crews try to plow roads promptly after snowfalls, but when temperatures fall to 40 to 50 below they often give up. At that temperature the steel blades get brittle and sometimes break.

IT CAN BE pretty serious business trying to drive or walk in blizzards, but David Timothy Kneeland, director of the Institute for Survival Education, Seattle, has advice on that:

• Stay calm if you go into a ditch. Try to relax. Stay with the car, the best shelter available."

• Keep a survival kit in the car, including wool blankets, space blankets or sleeping bags, stocking cap, mittens, wool socks, scarves, big plastic garbage bags for keeping dry and cutting heat loss, candles, matches, flashlight, insulated bottle of warm liquid and a whistle and mirror for signaling.

"And a prayer book," Kneeland added.

• If you get stalled in a blizzard with no survival kit, Kneeland advised: "Cut into that car. Rip out the headliner in the car roof and wrap it around you. Use rugs and floor mats and tear upholstery from seats to keep warm."

"One of the best insulators is a newspaper," he said.

• A skier, hiker or snowmobiler should carry a pack, with a warm coat, rain gear, bottle of water, matches, candle, whistle, mirror, medical kit, pad for sitting on snow, map, compass, plastic tarp, tape, knife and candy bars for energy.

Another bit of advice from Kneeland:

"Hug a tree. It makes you stand still long enough to calm down and figure out what to do next."

Now that everyone is ready for a fun winter in the north, Warren Nordley, head of Dayton's travel department in Minneapolis, reports:

"A record number of people are making reservations to fly South this winter."

Over Indian fishing rights

122-year-old treaties cause headaches

OLYMPIA, Wash. (UPI) — Territorial Gov. Isaac I. Stevens' final solution for what he called the Indian problem 122 years ago has created more controversy that is likely to solve.

Stevens, an Army veteran of the Mexican-American War, was the state of Washington's first chief executive. In 1854 and early 1855, he made a whirlwind sweep through the western portion of the territory and came back with a collection of treaties with various Indian tribes.

Soon afterward Indians decided they had been tricked and a bloody war began.

THE MOST important aspect of the treaties still in conflict is Indian fishing rights.

A large part of the problem stems from the fact Stevens died before he could explain what he meant in the treaties. A major general in the Union Army, he fell in the Battle of Chantilly in Virginia in 1862.

The current crisis began 2½ years ago when U.S. District Judge George H. Boldt ruled that the Stevens' treaties meant that Indians had a right to half the available fish.

State courts, while recognizing much more limited Indian fishing rights, have never come close to the 50-50 split.

AT THE STATE level, several courts have also ruled that in spite of what Judge Boldt said, State Fisheries Director Don Moos does not have the power to allocate salmon to enforce treaty rights.

The State Supreme Court currently has under advisement a request that it greatly reduce Indian fishing rights. Judge Boldt's name came up, and not in a friendly manner, frequently during oral arguments before the state court.

For his part, outgoing Gov. Dan Evans thinks Boldt is taking a bum rap.

"Many people may not like it, but rather than concentrate their fire on Judge Boldt if they are looking for a scapegoat, perhaps it is the people who signed the original treaties 120 years ago," Evans said.

STEVENS KNEW he was in trouble over the treaties prior to his death in the war. Congress had refused to ratify all but the first treaty and Stevens had been censured by his own territorial legislature. He promised to some day write a full explanation of his aims.

"I trust the time will come when I shall be able to vindicate them and show they were wise and proper and that they accomplished a great end," Stevens said.

On the speciifc subject of Indian fishing, Stevens said in a Dept. of Interior report:

"It was thought necessary to allow them to fish at all accustomed places since this would not in any manner interfere with the rights of citizens, and was necessary for the Indians to obtain a subsistence.

That may have been fine 120 years ago when salmon and steelhead trout were so plentiful that they were used for fertilizer, but as fishing increased and fish runs declined, the situation became increasingly tense.

NOW, THE unpopularity of Boldt's ruling resulted in demonstrations on land and afloat.

Commercial fishermen have protested at the state capitol, and a group of gill netters decided to take matters into their own hands and fish without permission.

That's something the Indians used to do.

A non-Indian fisherman was shot by a State Fisheries Dept. patrol officer during one protest fish-in in Puget Sound, and it took the presence of two Coast Guard vessels to end the protest several days later.

Stevens, himself, thought little of the judiciary and when in 1856 territorial Judge Edward M. Lander ruled against Stevens' wishes in a case involving Indians, Stevens had Lander thrown in jail.

It is not that simple now, with state and federal courts apparently on a collision course unless the U.S. Supreme Court acts.

Head north for winter: but think warm

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — The blizzards will howl and the thermometers will plunge far below zero but persons in the north country insist you can be comfortable and even have fun in that kind of weather.

No need to hibernate. Just be prepared for the cold and snow and enjoy it.

International Falls and Bemidji, Minn., often run a close race to be ice box of the nation, with temperatures falling to 40 below zero or colder. Minneapolis and St. Paul in southern Minnesota are milder, with coldest temperatures more like 20-30 below.

But residents keep moving and don't even slow up much.

A NEW YORK newspaperman wrote years ago that Minnesota in winter was "unfit for human habitation." Angry St. Paul citizens started an annual Winter Carnival filled with outdoor festivities to prove winters are fun.

Thousands of persons in the north race over the snowy countryside on snowmobiles at 40-50 miles an hour in the winter, and skate and ski down hills or cross country.

The ardent fisherman heads for a lake with a fish shack behind his car and chisel in hand, ready to cut through two or three feet of ice in search of anything with fins. Families even go to the parks for picnics in the snow.

"The secret," various authorities say, "is to be prepared."

There are all sorts of good tips for this, like the old mountaineer saying:

"If your feet get cold, put on your hat."

WHEN THE TEMPERATURE is around zero, most body heat escapes through the top of the head like a chimney. Heavy wool stocking, fur and down caps are ideal. Goose down jackets, snowmobil suits and insulated mittens and boots also are big sellers.

Towns in the far north sink water mains at least eight feet below ground level to escape frost. Even then there's no guarantee. Once at Bemidji, the frost went down 12 feet.

Motorists in the far north fill car radiators with almost pure antifreeze, protecting them from temperatures down to 80 below.

Many drivers install electrically operated tank heaters in their motors to keep oil and engine blocks warm. Occasionally a motorist has tried to thaw his engine by building a wood fire under it, but fire departments frown greatly on the practice.

Motorists sometimes get free parking in far north communities because the meters freeze up.

City, county and state crews try to plow roads promptly after snowfalls, but when temperatures fall to 40 to 50 below they often give up. At that temperature the steel blades get brittle and sometimes break.

IT CAN BE pretty serious business trying to drive or walk in blizzards, but David Timothy Kneeland, director of the Institute for Survival Education, Seattle, has advice on that:

• Stay calm if you go into a ditch. Try to relax. Stay with the car, the best shelter available."

• Keep a survival kit in the car, including wool blankets, space blankets or sleeping bags, stocking cap, mittens, wool socks, scarves, big plastic garbage bags for keeping dry and cutting heat loss, candles, matches, flashlight, insulated bottle of warm liquid and a whistle and mirror for signaling.

"And a prayer book," Kneeland added.

• If you get stalled in a blizzard with no survival kit, Kneeland advised: "Cut into that car. Rip out the headliner in the car roof and wrap it around you. Use rugs and floor mats and tear upholstery from seats to keep warm."

"One of the best insulators is a newspaper," he said.

• A skier, hiker or snowmobiler should carry a pack, with a warm coat, rain gear, bottle of water, matches, candle, whistle, mirror, medical kit, pad for sitting on snow, map, compass, plastic tarp, tape, knife and candy bars for energy.

Another bit of advice from Kneeland:

Rail agreement benefits suburbs

Announcement that the Regional Transportation Authority and the Chicago and North Western Ry. have come to terms on the purchase of commuter service should be good news to Northwest suburban riders.

Fares on the railroad are expected to drop when the RTA implements its zone fare system. For example, under zone fares now in effect on other railroads, the monthly fare from Arlington Heights to Chicago would drop from $41.45 to $39.15; from Des Plaines the monthly ticket would drop from $36.30 to $35.10; and from Mount Prospect it would drop from $39.55 to $35.10.

In addition, the RTA also can introduce student and senior citizen discounts on the North Western as it has on other commuter railroads.

Any necessary adjustments to the railroad's timetable also can be made by the RTA.

And a 15 per cent fare increase that the railroad had requested is now a dead letter.

C&NW riders could start enjoying these benefits within several months if the RTA acts expeditiously.

For its part, the railroad received a $67.7 million package that includes $21.2 million for the sale of its locomotives and coaches to the RTA, a $29.5 million four-year operating subsidy and $17 million in capital improvements.

The North Western has a fine record of serving the Northwest suburbs. Its trains run on time and with reasonable comfort.

Historically, it also has been a premium service with the highest fares of any commuter railroad in the Chicago area.

The RTA can lower those fares by implementing the zone fare system, discounts for students and senior citizens and, if necessary, schedule changes. When it acts to do so, the RTA will have begun to meet its responsibility to the taxpayers in this area.

State law needed for flame retardant clothes

Dana Vogel got her wish — she made it home for Christmas.

She's pretty lucky. Doctors first had feared the 8-year-old Palatine girl might be in the hospital until February recovering from burns she sustained when her blouse burst into flames after passing near a candle.

It was a tragic accident that never should have happened.

Currently Illinois has no legislation setting flame retardant standards for children's outerwear garments. Such legislation is seriously needed.

Statistics indicate that children under the age of 10 are involved in three times as many accidental fires as are other age groups. This same group is least prepared to know what to do if their clothing catches on fire.

California has adopted fire retardant standards for children's outerwear, Massachusetts is considering such legislation, and Illinois should do the same.

Until such legislation is adopted, parents should think about flammability when shopping for children's clothing. Frilly blouses, puffy sleeves and fuzzy fabrics may be cute, but they also may be highly flammable. Tight weaves and clothes that fit close to the body are recommended because less air gets in to feed the flame.

Press secretary Jody Powell

He's not just another mouthpiece

by TOM TIEDE

WASHINGTON — The way Jody Powell explains it is that he was walking through a Georgia shopping center, minding his own business, when a man grabbed his hand, smiled, and said: "Hi, I'm Jimmy Carter and I'm running for governor."

That was a decade ago. The incident changed the face of American politics.

Powell is now the 33-year-old press secretary to the president-elect. But more than this he is the loyal companion and baggage bearer without whom next month's inaugural would be substantially different. If Jody Powell has arrived where he is because of Jimmy Carter, the reverse of this proposition is equally true and obvious.

Carter has said it himself, remembering how it was to get started in national politics. At first it was only "Jody and I." Family members were added. Then others. But in the lean days, the era of "Jimmy Who?", Powell was Carter's principal courtier; if he hadn't existed, he'd have had to be invented — if he could have been.

So when the new chief takes office he will have as his spokesman a devoted servant, a surrogate son, and to a very real degree a partner in power. The two are as close as hens on a January roost, as they say in Plains. It's expected that Jody will know whatever Jimmy knows. The relationship has few White House precedents.

Presumably, there is much to be said for the setup. For the first time in years, perhaps the first time ever, the hireling who speaks to the nation for the president will know absolutely what he's talking about. Besides this he will himself be part of the administration's decision-making process. What he says will have weight.

And yet the prospect is not altogether bright. The idea of Jody Powell controlling White House news for the next four years is, quite frankly, most disturbing. Powell is quick, witty, intelligent and should have no trouble administering the 50-person White House propaganda staff. But the job is simply too important for a president's alter ego.

Already it is clear that Powell is much more a professional Carterite than a professional communicator. He is not with his boss for money or for public service, but rather he is with him for love. For years it has been his duty to promote and protect Jimmy Carter, and no doubt the ethic will carry on into Washington.

It is true that all presidential press secretaries are fond of their employers. Ron Ziegler was so loyal to Richard Nixon he chose disgrace rather than morality as his guide. Ron Nessen, too, has been embraced by brainless devotion, growing cntemptuous of any who would question Jerry Ford. Given human nature, it is probably too much to expect more dispassion and detachment in the work.

But Powell's fidelity to his champion is of a singular kind. When Jimmy is wounded, Jody feels the pain. During the campaign his periodic raging at critical press coverage took the character of personal bitterness. Conversely, when Powell liked coverage, he rewarded the reporter with special treatment. Without question he did these things because of his own stake in the campaign's future.

So, here is the insurmountable weakness of Jody Powell as the White House spokesman: his own stake in the regime's success is too high. He will not only be the mouthpiece but the architect of the administration. Doubts about it will therefore be doubts about him. As no other press secretary in history, then, he will have enormous personal and emotional reasons for coloring the news flow.

And surely the doubts will come. The Carter administration will almost certainly fall into severely controversial times. Soon enough Jody Powell will be locked in the White House briefing room with a gaggle of reporters demanding to know of the nuclear scare, or the Soviet blackmail, or the sex scandal, ad infinitum. What then?

Maybe Powell will rise to the occasions. It may be he will set aside personal gain in favor of public good and adhere to plain truth no matter the face it puts on his benefactor. One hopes, but is wary. Jody and Jimmy may be too close to be divided by propriety.

Reader upset with Alaskan hunt on wolves for game management

During the fall, the Alaskan Dept. of Fish and Game planned a gala hunting event for its resident "sportsmen." Billed as "exterminating wolves in the name of game management," it was a charitable affair to help all the little moose grow up big and strong so the hunters could shoot them.

Poor little deer! They had a rough time of it, what with all those harsh winters, diseases and mean predators killing them off. The nice killers — excuse me, I mean "sportsmen" — decided to make their lives a little easier by getting rid of the competition — Oops! Sorry! I meant those nasty predatorial wolves — and then they lent a further helping hand by continuing their policy of hunting seasons with no bag limits. As you can see, it was intelligently thought out and obviously based on what was best for the deer. Now the sweet little things wouldn't have to worry about being pulled down and bullied by a bunch of odious old wolves, when they were sick and starving to death!

The hunt was very successful, if one can call delivering a crippling blow to an eco-system success. Sorry, I shouldn't have said that. There is no evidence that the hunt was harmful to the ecosystem. That is because the Alaskan Dept. of Fish and Game never got around to filing an environmental impact statement.

The Alaskan Dept. of Fish and Game's last party was so successful that they are planning another one this winter — this time for the benefit of the little caribou up north. It will be bigger and better than the last one of course. Biggest and best is an American tradition. This time, when it is ended, the party may be over permanently.

It has been said that whenever conflicts arise between man and nature, nature always loses. It can also be said that when nature loses so do we.

Teachers in fist fight cause concern

When I read your article about two of Dist. 59 teachers at Grove Junior High School involving themselves in a fist fight, I could not help thinking about what a sterling example they were setting.

I feel certain that whatever caused this outburst must have been coming to a boil over an extended period of time and I also feel certain that the students were aware of this underlining feeling between the teachers, so it is not just the actual fight that concerns me but the whole atmosphere that must have been prevailing.

It also concerns me that upon transferring one of these teachers from Grove Junior High, it is the students who suffer again by having to adjust to a new teacher in mid-year.

Maybe Dist. 59 should concern themselves more with the adults involved in their schools than with the children. Good students don't make a good school district; good teachers and good administrators do.

There's some good in the news

i would like to express my appreciation to the kind volunteers from the Palatine-Rolling Meadows Chapter of FISH. If it were not for these dedicated people, those of us who are disabled or elderly would find it almost impossible to get to the doctor, dentist or to the bank, since we do not drive and cannot afford taxicabs even if they were dependable.

I decided this year that organizations such as this do more good directly for people than many large impersonal charities, which I have supported in the past. Therefore, such money as I can donate will go to this type of organization in the future.

State law needed for flame retardant clothes

Dana Vogel got her wish — she made it home for Christmas.

She's pretty lucky. Doctors first had feared the 8-year-old Palatine girl might be in the hospital until February recovering from burns she sustained when her blouse burst into flames after passing near a candle.

It was a tragic accident that never should have happened.

Currently Illinois has no legislation setting flame retardant standards for children's outerwear garments. Such legislation is seriously needed.

Statistics indicate that children under the age of 10 are involved in three times as many accidental fires as are other age groups. This same group is least prepared to know what to do if their clothing catches on fire.

California has adopted fire retardant standards for children's outerwear, Massachusetts is considering such legislation, and Illinois should do the same.

Until such legislation is adopted, parents should think about flammability when shopping for children's clothing. Frilly blouses, puffy sleeves and fuzzy fabrics may be cute, but they also may be highly flammable. Tight weaves and clothes that fit close to the body are recommended because less air gets in to feed the flame.

Press secretary Jody Powell

He's not just another mouthpiece

by TOM TIEDE

WASHINGTON — The way Jody Powell explains it is that he was walking through a Georgia shopping center, minding his own business, when a man grabbed his hand, smiled, and said: "Hi, I'm Jimmy Carter and I'm running for governor."

That was a decade ago. The incident changed the face of American politics.

Powell is now the 33-year-old press secretary to the president-elect. But more than this he is the loyal companion and baggage bearer without whom next month's inaugural would be substantially different. If Jody Powell has arrived where he is because of Jimmy Carter, the reverse of this proposition is equally true and obvious.

Carter has said it himself, remembering how it was to get started in national politics. At first it was only "Jody and I." Family members were added. Then others. But in the lean days, the era of "Jimmy Who?", Powell was Carter's principal courtier; if he hadn't existed, he'd have had to be invented — if he could have been.

So when the new chief takes office he will have as his spokesman a devoted servant, a surrogate son, and to a very real degree a partner in power. The two are as close as hens on a January roost, as they say in Plains. It's expected that Jody will know whatever Jimmy knows. The relationship has few White House precedents.

Presumably, there is much to be said for the setup. For the first time in years, perhaps the first time ever, the hireling who speaks to the nation for the president will know absolutely what he's talking about. Besides this he will himself be part of the administration's decision-making process. What he says will have weight.

And yet the prospect is not altogether bright. The idea of Jody Powell controlling White House news for the next four years is, quite frankly, most disturbing. Powell is quick, witty, intelligent and should have no trouble administering the 50-person White House propaganda staff. But the job is simply too important for a president's alter ego.

Already it is clear that Powell is much more a professional Carterite than a professional communicator. He is not with his boss for money or for public service, but rather he is with him for love. For years it has been his duty to promote and protect Jimmy Carter, and no doubt the ethic will carry on into Washington.

It is true that all presidential press secretaries are fond of their employers. Ron Ziegler was so loyal to Richard Nixon he chose disgrace rather than morality as his guide. Ron Nessen, too, has been embraced by brainless devotion, growing cntemptuous of any who would question Jerry Ford. Given human nature, it is probably too much to expect more dispassion and detachment in the work.

But Powell's fidelity to his champion is of a singular kind. When Jimmy is wounded, Jody feels the pain. During the campaign his periodic raging at critical press coverage took the character of personal bitterness. Conversely, when Powell liked coverage, he rewarded the reporter with special treatment. Without question he did these things because of his own stake in the campaign's future.

So, here is the insurmountable weakness of Jody Powell as the White House spokesman: his own stake in the regime's success is too high. He will not only be the mouthpiece but the architect of the administration. Doubts about it will therefore be doubts about him. As no other press secretary in history, then, he will have enormous personal and emotional reasons for coloring the news flow.

And surely the doubts will come. The Carter administration will almost certainly fall into severely controversial times. Soon enough Jody Powell will be locked in the White House briefing room with a gaggle of reporters demanding to know of the nuclear scare, or the Soviet blackmail, or the sex scandal, ad infinitum. What then?

Maybe Powell will rise to the occasions. It may be he will set aside personal gain in favor of public good and adhere to plain truth no matter the face it puts on his benefactor. One hopes, but is wary. Jody and Jimmy may be too close to be divided by propriety.

Reader upset with Alaskan hunt on wolves for game management

During the fall, the Alaskan Dept. of Fish and Game planned a gala hunting event for its resident "sportsmen." Billed as "exterminating wolves in the name of game management," it was a charitable affair to help all the little moose grow up big and strong so the hunters could shoot them.

Poor little deer! They had a rough time of it, what with all those harsh winters, diseases and mean predators killing them off. The nice killers — excuse me, I mean "sportsmen" — decided to make their lives a little easier by getting rid of the competition — Oops! Sorry! I meant those nasty predatorial wolves — and then they lent a further helping hand by continuing their policy of hunting seasons with no bag limits. As you can see, it was intelligently thought out and obviously based on what was best for the deer. Now the sweet little things wouldn't have to worry about being pulled down and bullied by a bunch of odious old wolves, when they were sick and starving to death!

The hunt was very successful, if one can call delivering a crippling blow to an eco-system success. Sorry, I shouldn't have said that. There is no evidence that the hunt was harmful to the eco-system. That is because the Alaskan Dept. of Fish and Game never got around to filing an environmental impact statement.

The Alaskan Dept. of Fish and Game's last party was so successful that they are planning another one this winter — this time for the benefit of the little caribou up north. It will be bigger and better than the last one of course. Biggest and best is an American tradition. This time, when it is ended, the party may be over permanently.

It has been said that whenever conflicts arise between man and nature, nature always loses. It can also be said that when nature loses so do we.

Teachers in fist fight cause concern

When I read your article about two of Dist. 59 teachers at Grove Junior High School involving themselves in a fist fight, I could not help thinking about what a sterling example they were setting.

I feel certain that whatever caused this outburst must have been coming to a boil over an extended period of time and I also feel certain that the students were aware of this underlining feeling between the teachers, so it is not just the actual fight that concerns me but the whole atmosphere that must have been prevailing.

It also concerns me that upon transferring one of these teachers from Grove Junior High, it is the students who suffer again by having to adjust to a new teacher in mid-year.

Maybe Dist. 59 should concern themselves more with the adults involved in their schools than with the children. Good students don't make a good school district; good teachers and good administrators do.

There's some good in the news

i would like to express my appreciation to the kind volunteers from the Palatine-Rolling Meadows Chapter of FISH. If it were not for these dedicated people, those of us who are disabled or elderly would find it almost impossible to get to the doctor, dentist or to the bank, since we do not drive and cannot afford taxicabs even if they were dependable.

I decided this year that organizations such as this do more good directly for people than many large impersonal charities, which I have supported in the past. Therefore, such money as I can donate will go to this type of organization in the future.

Mayor gets even with paper work

No one is immune from the paperwork plague. Businessmen see profits eroded by the ocst of filling our federal forms. Workers' paychecks are shrunk by the same demon. A Commission on Federal Paperwork sends out questionnaires asking what can be done about it.

Is there any escape? Not likely. But a measure of vengeance can be exacted, for what it's worth.

Witness the story of the mayor of Midland, Tex., as reported recently in Fortune magazine. The mayor had gone through a paper-work jungle trying to get a grant from the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development. It took a nightmarish 10 months, and the mayor burned to get even.

HE GOT HIS chance when, shortly thereafter, HUD made a request for a reserved parking place at Midland's municipal airport. Part of his response to HUD's requsst read as follows:

"You must obtain from the U.S. Government Printing Office, or the National Archives, or the Library of Congress, or some place, a supply of application form COM-1975. You must submit three executed and 14 conformed copies of this application . . .

"Submit a genealogical table for everyone who will operate said vehicle so that we can ascertain that there will be a precisely equal percentage of whites, blacks and other minorities, as well as women and the elderly.

"SUBMIT AN environmental impact statement . . . showing the number of times the vehicle will be operated, time of day, the name of the operator of the vehicle, the number of other vehicles that might be coming into or leaving the parking lot at the same time, as well as the number and type of aircraft that might be landing or taking off at the same time, and an exact conclusion as to the effect this will have on the atmosphere of west Texas.

"In order to obtain approval of a negative environmental impact statement, you will not be able to (a) operate the car on gasoline produced from domestic oil, because that would require that someone discover it, process it and deliver it, and it is possible that some private person, firm or corporation might realize a profit as a result of such activities . . . (b) operate the car from energy produced by coal because this might require digging a hole in the ground.

"Submit a certificate from the attorney general of the United States that all certifiers of the above assurances are duly and legally authorized by Congress to make such certificates . . . and that the United States is a duly organized and legally existing independent nation with the full right, power and authority to operate automobiles in the first place.

"Upon receipt of the foregoing, rest assured that the application will be promptly referred to someone for approval. We cannot state at this time who that someone will be because whatever departments he or she is in will be undergoingreorganization. . ."

Hats off to the mayor of Midland, Texas.

Medical malpractice panic stemmed

day compared with $1.19 per day last year and $13.57 per day next year;

• Holy Family Hospital, Des Plaines, last year paid four times the 1974 rate for less coverage as premiums went from $96,635 to $391,058. For patients, the increase means about $5 per day for malpractice coverage compared with about $1 per day before.

In retaliation to malpractice suits, doctors in California and New York went on unprecedented strikes, and Illinois physicians threatened to follow.

By fall of 1975, the Illinois General Assembly approved legislation that limited malpractice suits to a maximum of $500,000, established a review panel of experts to screen lawsuits and set a two-year statute of limitations for filing actions.

The first two provisions have been held unconstitutional, but the legislature's action signaled the start of a counter movement that has brought novel moves by doctors, hospitals and the courts.

The malpractice backlash is erupting on several fronts, but the main battleground continues to be the court. From the decision to file a suit and sometimes even to the decision on when and for how much to settle a case, attorneys play a key role in the malpractice controversy.

FROM ATTORNEYS to doctors, most connected with the malpractice dilemma say the factor most responsible for the crisis is the frivolous lawsuit, filed on shallow legal and medical merits.

Such suits are filed by the hundreds, clogging the courts and tying up months of time for doctors, hospital adminiistrators and defense attorneys. In Illinois there is no law or established civil action to bar malicious or frivolous lawsuits.

Lawsuits against area hospitals range in seriousness from accusations of wrongful death to one filed against Lutheran General Hospital last year by a woman and her son who, while outpatients, fainted when they witnessed a mock emergency disaster drill at the hospital.

That suit, which sought $100,000 in damages, charged the hospital should have warned the two outpatients the emergency drill would take place.

Judge Canel, dismissed the suit May 17, 1976.

The case, one of 14 that have been dismissed from among 75 suits brought in the last two years against Northwest Community, Alexian Brothers, Lutheran General and Holy Family hospitals, points up the problem. Even though half of all malpractice suits eventually are dismissed, each case costs hospitals and their insurance compnaies a minimum of $2,500 to $5,000 to defend, administrators said.

FURTHER, THOUGH the number of lawsuits has declined in 1976, the sums sought in the past two years still speak shockingly to the malpractice dilemma:

• Northwest Community Hospital in 1975 and 1976 has been named in 24 suits seeking nearly $34 million.

• Lutheran General Hospital has been named in 27 suits filed in the past two years seeking more than $27 million.

• Alexian Brothers Medical Center has been named in 16 suits in 1975 and 1976 seeking more than $25 million.

• Holy Family Hospital has been named in eight suits in the past two years seeking nearly $14 million.

However, the disproportion between claim and judgment becomes apparent when settlement records are examined. Court judgments against doctors and hospitals are few, and the dollar amounts of judgments are miniscule compared with the dollars plaintiffs seek.

The largest judgment against Northwest Community, for example, was $7,500, said president Malcomb MacCoun. Bruce Fisher, vice president in charge of finances at Alexian Brothers, said a $25,000 judgment was the largest he could recall.

Lutheran General once had to pay a $150,000 settlement in a case in which it was a co-defendant because the doctor found guilty did not have sufficient insurance to pay the total judgment, said Theodore Jacobsen, the hospital's executive vice president.

"ONE OF the problems we run into is tying up so many people (in settling a suit,)" Alexian Brothers' Fisher said. Hours spent taking depositions from doctors, meeting with attorneys and appearing at pretrial proceedings costs doctors and hospitals time and money, he said.

"You settle on the basis of economics rather than malpractice," he said.

Doctors, administrators and even some lawyers blame attorneys for the problem of frivolous lawsuits. Philip Corboy, a noted Loop lawyer who has represented doctors and patients in malpractice actions, told The Herald there are attorneys who will file groundless malpractice cases.

Most cases are taken on a contingency fee basis, in which the attorney is paid an average of 33 per cent of the settlement. The attorney is assured of payment even if the case is settled out of court, as most are.

If the case is lost or dismissed, the attorney generally is not paid.

Attorneys told The Herald the contingency fee system is necessary because it is one that affords the middle class a means to the legal process.

"The wealthy can afford to pay for an attorney's time and the poor can get legal aid, but the middle class would have no recourse to the courts," one attorney said.

JUDGE CANEL agrees. "The system doesn't lead to frivolous suits, but it has to be fair," he said. "Without it many would be unable to use the courts."

But abuses can result when an attorney settles a case not on its merits but on the basis of the attorney's aim of paying for his expenses.

"I remember one attorney representing a former patient who, when it was obvious he wouldn't win the case, tried to settle with us. He finally asked for a figure that was obviously just his fee," Lutheran General's Jacobsen said. "If this isn't taking care of himself and not his client, I don't know what is."

Frivolous suits that spawn spiraling medical malpractice insurance premiums are being met with new attacks by the medical field and the courts.

Most prominent is the move by doctors to sue lawyers who have brought unfounded malpractice suits. The first such suit, brought this year by radiologist Dr. Leonard Berlin of Skokie Valley Hospital, was decided in the doctor's favor and has opened a new dimension in the malpractice controversy.

DR. BERLIN sued a Wilmette couple and their attorney who had charged Dr. Berlin and another doctor with failing to diagnose a finger fracture. The couple eventually withdrew the suit, but Dr. Berlin filed his action charging legal malpractice and negligence.

A jury on June 1 found for Dr. Berlin in the precedent-setting case. The matter is under appeal, but if upheld it will establish a basis to recover damages for frivolous malpractice lawsuits.

The get-tough policy of Judge Canel has put attorneys on notice that groundless lawsuits will not be allowed to tie up the year-old malpractice court's docket.

Judge Canel also has worked to reduce the time it takes to decide a malpractice suit by insisting that lawyers be prepared to have an "expert witness" available to testify.

The plaintiff by law is required to have supporting testimony from an "expert witness" in all malpractice cases. In medical malpractice cases, that means a doctor must be available who will testify that the doctor being sued violated accepted medical standards, causing the plaintiff's complaint.

In the past, attorneys have delayed cases for years until doctors, generally reluctant to testify against their peers, could be found for a case. But Judge Canel now requires attorneys to announce who their "expert witness" will be by the time the first pretrial proceedings of a case are scheduled.

EVEN HOSPITALS are bolting from the norm in an effort to control rising costs.

Alexian Brothers Medical Center and Lutheran General Hospital have formed their own insurance companies in Bermuda. Northwest Community and Holy Family hospitals also have considered alternatives to commercial insurance coverage.

The self-insurance move has come out of necessity as much as choice. In the past year, all but one of the major insurance companies have dropped out of the malpractice insurance market.

"It doesn't pay the insurance companies to hold down expenses," Lutheran General's Jacobsen said. "Insurance companies increase premiums to cover costs." But those costs ultimately are borne by the public, he added.

"I think the general public is coming to realize that a malpractice suit is not just spinning the wheel and hoping you'll hit the right number. It costs everyone.

Medical malpractice panic stemmed

day compared with $1.19 per day last year and $13.57 per day next year;

• Holy Family Hospital. Des Plaines, last year paid four times the 1974 rate for less coverage as premiums went from $96,635 to $391,058. For patients, the increase means about $5 per day for malpractice coverage compared with about $1 per day before.

In retaliation to malpractice suits, doctors in California and New York went on unprecedented strikes, and Illinois physicians threatened to follow.

By fall of 1975, the Illinois General Assembly approved legislation that limited malpractice suits to a maximum of $500,000, established a review panel of experts to screen lawsuits and set a two-year statute of limitations for filing actions.

The first two provisions have been held unconstitutional, but the legislature's action signaled the start of a counter movement that has brought novel moves by doctors, hospitals and the courts.

The malpractice backlash is erupting on several fronts, but the main battleground continues to be the court. From the decision to file a suit and sometimes even to the decision on when and for how much to settle a case, attorneys play a key role in the malpractice controversy.

FROM ATTORNEYS to doctors, most connected with the malpractice dilemma say the factor most responsible for the crisis is the frivolous lawsuit, filed on shallow legal and medical merits.

Such suits are filed by the hundreds, clogging the courts and tying up months of time for doctors, hospital adminiistrators and defense attorneys. In Illinois there is no law or established civil action to bar malicious or frivolous lawsuits.

Lawsuits against area hospitals range in seriousness from accusations of wrongful death to one filed against Lutheran General Hospital last year by a woman and her son who, while outpatients, fainted when they witnessed a mock emergency disaster drill at the hospital.

That suit, which sought $100,000 in damages, charged the hospital should have warned the two outpatients the emergency drill would take place.

Judge Canel, dismissed the suit May 17, 1976.

The case, one of 14 that have been dismissed from among 75 suits brought in the last two years against Northwest Community, Alexian Brothers, Lutheran General and Holy Family hospitals, points up the problem. Even though half of all malpractice suits eventually are dismissed, each case costs hospitals and their insurance compnaies a minimum of $2,500 to $5,000 to defend, administrators said.

FURTHER, THOUGH the number of lawsuits has declined in 1976, the sums sought in the past two years still speak shockingly to the malpractice dilemma:

• Northwest Community Hospital in 1975 and 1976 has been named in 24 suits seeking nearly $34 million.

• Lutheran General Hospital has been named in 27 suits filed in the past two years seeking more than $27 million.

• Alexian Brothers Medical Center has been named in 16 suits in 1975 and 1976 seeking more than $25 million.

• Holy Family Hospital has been named in eight suits in the past two years seeking nearly $14 million.

However, the disproportion between claim and judgment becomes apparent when settlement records are examined. Court judgments against doctors and hospitals are few, and the dollar amounts of judgments are miniscule compared with the dollars plaintiffs seek.

The largest judgment against Northwest Community, for example, was $7,500, said president Malcomb MacCoun. Bruce Fisher, vice president in charge of finances at Alexian Brothers, said a $25,000 judgment was the largest he could recall.

Lutheran General once had to pay a $150,000 settlement in a case in which it was a co-defendant because the doctor found guilty did not have sufficient insurance to pay the total judgment, said Theodore Jacobsen, the hospital's executive vice president.

"ONE OF the problems we run into is tying up so many people (in settling a suit,)" Alexian Brothers' Fisher said. Hours spent taking depositions from doctors, meeting with attorneys and appearing at pretrial proceedings costs doctors and hospitals time and money, he said.

"You settle on the basis of economics rather than malpractice," he said.

Doctors, administrators and even some lawyers blame attorneys for the problem of frivolous lawsuits. Philip Corboy, a noted Loop lawyer who has represented doctors and patients in malpractice actions, told The Herald there are attorneys who will file groundless malpractice cases.

Most cases are taken on a contingency fee basis, in which the attorney is paid an average of 33 per cent of the settlement. The attorney is assured of payment even if the case is settled out of court, as most are.

If the case is lost or dismissed, the attorney generally is not paid.

Attorneys told The Herald the contingency fee system is necessary because it is one that affords the middle class a means to the legal process.

"The wealthy can afford to pay for an attorney's time and the poor can get legal aid, but the middle class would have no recourse to the courts," one attorney said.

JUDGE CANEL agrees. "The system doesn't lead to frivolous suits, but it has to be fair," he said. "Without it many would be unable to use the courts."

But abuses can result when an attorney settles a case not on its merits but on the basis of the attorney's aim of paying for his expenses.

"I remember one attorney representing a former patient who, when it was obvious he wouldn't win the case, tried to settle with us. He finally asked for a figure that was obviously just his fee," Lutheran General's Jacobsen said. "If this isn't taking care of himself and not his client, I don't know what is."

Frivolous suits that spawn spiraling medical malpractice insurance premiums are being met with new attacks by the medical field and the courts.

Most prominent is the move by doctors to sue lawyers who have brought unfounded malpractice suits. The first such suit, brought this year by radiologist Dr. Leonard Berlin of Skokie Valley Hospital, was decided in the doctor's favor and has opened a new dimension in the malpractice controversy.

Soviets seek strategic superiority: report

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The New York Times said Sunday that an official U.S. intelligence estimate has concluded that the Soviet Union is seeking strategic superiority over the United States.

This makes at least the fourth time this study, classified top secret and representing the consensus of U.S. intelligence agencies, has been discussed with reporters.

Some congressional sources feel this may be part of a campaign by hardline factions in the military and intelligence communities to reduce the new administration's options.

THE STUDY'S conclusion is not necessarily new. Defense Sec. Donald H. Rumsfeld has been discussing the "trends" for a long time, saying "the Russians are 4-foot-8 right now, but they're growing, and you're not going to like them when they're 6-foot-4." Air Force Sec. Thomas C. Reed has declared that the Soviets want strategic superiority as he argued for production of the B1 bomber and faster development of the new MX missile.

The Times quoted a top-level military intelligence officer on the estimate:

"It was more than somber — it was very grim. It flatly states the judgment that the Soviet Union is seeking superiority over United States forces. The flat judgment that that is the aim of the Soviet Union is a majority view in the estimate. The questions begin on when they will achieve it."

IN NOVEMBER, the Boston Globe reported that a draft of the national security decision memorandum — NSDM 246 in shorthand — said the Soviets were seeking strategic superiority, and that President Ford wanted the study completed by Dec. 1.

In mid-December, administration sources indicated that the study accepted the draft's assertions when they told UPI's Robert Kaylor about a new generation of nuclear Russian missiles now in the research stage.

The Globe said last week that an independent group headed by Harvard professor Richard Pipes, given the same date, concluded the Soviets were seeking strategic superiority, and that CIA analysts had underestimated the capabilities.

The Times said the outsider's report "was an absolute disaster for the CIA."

The outside group asserted that the ultimate Soviet goal was to be able to disrupt sea lines of communication in case of war, prevent the U.S. Navy from making use of its aircraft carriers in land-based conflicts, increase antisubmarine efforts and, the Times said, "develop strategic forces that would ultimately have a superior first strike capability."

The CIA analysts replied that these conclusions did not necessarily follow from existing evidence. The Times quoted one CIA participant as saying, "for us the question is not whether the Russians are coming, but whether it is feasible for them to get there and how soon."

A congressional source with wide expertise in the area of military affairs said the new conclusions would have an effect on the Carter administration. The President-elect campaigned on a promise to cut $5 to $7 billion in waste from the Pentagon budget.

"For a new president, or a new secretary of defense, it's one thing to make decisions about spending when the intelligence community concludes that the Russians are seeking 'rough parity' and aggressively seeking to improve their strategic equipment," he said.

"It's another thing to look for ways to cut the budget, or make decisions about production of the B1 bomber, when the intelligence community tells you that the Russians are seeking superiority. Cuts made in that light can be attacked as attempts to undercut the U.S. military position."

The Ford administration has decided to go ahead with production of the B1, but is limited to spending only $87 million a month until Carter can look at the program and make his own decision.

Pentagon sources said some of the leaks abut new Russian military efforts were tied in with an unsuccessful Air Force effort to get the administration to approve $548 million for "brute force" development of MX, a new, highly accurate nuclear missile. Ford approved $277 million for MX, considered a "prudent" increase in light of new Soviet efforts.

Ask Andy

Corn's silk clothes new kernels

Andy sends the Encyclopedia Britannica's 1976 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Mike Morrison, 9, of Dillsburgh, Pa., for his question:

WHY DOES AN EAR OF CORN HAVE SILK?

Naturally, each plant does its best to make sure there will be seeds for future generations. In the case of corn, the seeds are golden kernels packed in neat, tight rows around each ear. Before the kernels develop into seeds, however, they must be fertilized by pollen grains that grow in the feathery tassel at the top of the plant.

During the gowing season, the corn plant shoots up tall and straight on its jointed stalk. Each joint sprouts a long, swordlike leaf that curves gracefully out from the stem and downward at the tip. The base of the leaf wraps around the tough cornstalk, enclosing it in a shiny green sheath.

The top of the stalk sports a feathery tassel. It may be green, yellow, red or even a handsome purple, but most tassels are of a pinkish hue. The perky tassel consists of hundreds of tiny flowers, and when the time is right the flowers will produce pollen.

Meanwhile, small ears of soon-to-be corn are sprouting down on the cornstalk. There may be one or as many as eight of the stubby ears, depending on the type of corn. Each ear is tenderly wrapped in its own leafy husk and tucked into the base of a leaf. The corncob inside the husk is crowded with rows of young green kernels, and each kernel grows a long silken thread. These threads poke out of the husk at the top and form a silken ponytail.

With the pollen grains up in the tossing tassels and the young kernels protected in their husks, the job of getting the two together is awesome. And this is where the silk gets into the act. When the pollen is ripe, the midsummer breezes blow the pollen grains throughout the entire cornfield. As a pollen grain lands on a thread of silk, it begins to grow a tiny tube down the strand to the kernel. Down through this tube moves a male cell that unites with an egg cell in the infant kernel. The result is a grain of golden corn.

Andy sends a Student Globe to Gina White, 12, of Salem, Mo., for her question:

IS A HARE A CERTAIN KIND OF RABBIT?

Hares are often mistaken for rabbits, but though they look alike there are differences. Rabbits are generally smaller than hares, and their ears are not quite so long. Baby hares are born with their eyes wide open and a full coat of fur. Rabbits, however, are blind at birth and have no hair at all. Another difference is that rabbits dig underground burrows where they live and produce their young. Hares simply make a nest in small, well-hidden ground hollows.

Hares are active during the dark nighttime hours, when they roam about looking for a juicy plant to nibble on. They are ready to mate by the time they are 6 months old and may have two or three litters a year. Each litter may produce from two to five young that are ready to hop around on the day they are born. Jack rabbits and the snowshoe rabbit are hares, but the cottontail rabbit is really a rabbit—even though he doesn't dig a burrow like other rabbits.

by Oswald and Jim Jacoby

Oswald: "The suicide squeeze is usually worked by a defender, but here is one that declarer worked out against himself."

Jim: "It certainly is one of the most unusual hands of 1976. South took East's queen of clubs with the king, led the nine of clubs, covered with dummy's ten, cashed the ace of clubs while discarding his four of hearts, led a fourth club to set up dummy's last one and suddenly found he could not afford to discard rom his own hand. A diamond discard would make it impossible for him to collect three diamond tricks and a spade discard would cost him a spade trick. So, he discarded a second heart."

Oswald: "This would have given him nine tricks except that West diagnosed the problem and led his deuce of hearts. This set up three heart tricks for West while he still held his ace of spades and South was down one."

Jim: "South could have made the hand by leading a low club instead of the ace from dummy at trick three. This would have kept him from squeezing himself and he would have made the game."

A Nebraska reader wants to know if we would open three spades with:

Spade K, Q, J, 10, x, x, x. Heart A, x. Diamond x, x. Club x, x.

The answer is that we certainly would. In fact this is just about a standard vulnerable three-level preempt. We don't have enough high cards for a one bid and we do expect to score seven tricks in our own hand with spades as trumps.

A $1,500 tax break, a plan for retirement—and you're not taking advantage of them?

It has surprised retirement planning experts that more people are not taking advantage of the Individual Retirement Account. These are people who need it most, the ones who are not currently participating in any qualified retirement plan.

The Pension Reform Act authorizes them to set aside each year in a separate retirement fund 15% of their annual wages up to $1,500. This not only provides a nest egg for retirement but saves several hundred dollars each year in income taxes, the exact amount depending on the individual's tax bracket. The amount that goes into an Individual Retirement Account is deducted from the gross income reported on the federal income tax return. No income tax is paid on the I.R.A. money until it is used in retirement years.

If you are employed and not currently covered by a qualified retirement plan, do yourself the favor of talking with one of our savings counselors about the I.R.A. and what it can do for you. You'll be glad next April 15 that you did—even more so during the years ahead when there will be no more pay checks.

SPECIAL HOURS to give you an opportunity to take advantage of the IRA plan during the current tax year, all Arlington Federal offices will be open on Dec. 28 and 30 from 9 A.M. to 10 P.M.*

Ask Andy

Corn's silk clothes new kernels

Andy sends the Encyclopedia Britannica's 1976 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Mike Morrison, 9, of Dillsburgh, Pa., for his question:
WHY DOES AN EAR OF CORN HAVE SILK?

Naturally, each plant does its best to make sure there will be seeds for future generations. In the case of corn, the seeds are golden kernels packed in neat, tight rows around each ear. Before the kernels develop into seeds, however, they must be fertilized by pollen grains that grow in the feathery tassel at the top of the plant.

During the gowing season, the corn plant shoots up tall and straight on its jointed stalk. Each joint sprouts a long, swordlike leaf that curves gracefully out from the stem and downward at the tip. The base of the leaf wraps around the tough cornstalk, enclosing it in a shiny green sheath.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE – Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

SET REALISTIC GOALS or mini-goals, advises Elaine Sullivan, originator of the confidence-building course, "Psychology of Personal Growth," part of the Oakton College Women's Program. "When you set realistic goals and reach them, it helps you feel good about yourself," she says.

"Resolved for 1977: To know myself better, to examine my lifestyle, to identify my needs."

A commendable resolution. But how will the Northwest suburban woman carry it out? Will she actually take steps to increase her self-awareness, self-confidence and self-direction?

Perhaps she had reared a family and is looking now for new ways to make life meaningful. Perhaps she is toying with the idea of returning to work, but it frightens or bewilders her. Or maybe she nebulously longs for intellectual stimulation or enrichment, or perhaps a delayed college education.

"We have a course especially designed for such women," said Pat Handzel, Women's Program director at Oakton Community College. "It focuses on setting goals for oneself, building self-confidence. It's for the woman who stops and says to herself, 'What am I going to do with the rest of my life?' "

THAT COURSE IS "Psychology of Personal Growth." It meets for three hours one day a week over a period of 16 weeks. There are several sections, one meeting at First Congregational Church, Des Plaines. Each section is limited to 15 persons. It is primarily experimental rather than academic. And it carries three degree credit hours.

Now that's a smooth way to learn, improve and enjoy oneself all at one time.

Let's sit in on a class. Elaine Sullivan, who originated the course more than four years ago, has asked the women to list their lifetime goals. When they finish, she asks that they write their short-term goals — "if you had only six months to live. Then she asks them to choose the three most important.

"I want to discover myself," volunteered one woman, "to take better care of myself. And I want to tune in more to my feelings with my husband and my children."

TO LOVE MYSELF, to understand myself, was a recurring theme. Elaine approved. "You must love yourself first in order to love others," she said. "Women too often discount their own needs."

Another goal echoed by several of the women was growth—to continue to learn, to continue mental exercise and cultural development to "stay green and growing intellectually and emotionally." Altruistic goals were included: "to give of myself," "to give something back to the community."

Families figured prominently: "to see that my children are educated and on the road to being self-sufficient adults," "to enjoy my husband and family."

"I can tell it in three words, all linked to 'enjoy'," said one woman. "Music—children—husband." Elaine approved of that, too. "It's real okay to enjoy life," she said.

TEXTBOOK FOR the course is "Women as Winners" by Jongeward & Scott, and indeed these women seemed on their way to becoming winners. According to Mrs. Sullivan, a great deal of change happens in that 16 weeks.

"The course is geared to help women develop their own potential—to clarify values, set goals, and see what options exist — that's important," said Elaine. "Women meet and are supported by other women; they challenge each other, they share feelings."

And what did the students find?

"My awareness has increased and I have achieved certain behavioral changes," said one woman, mother of three daughters, the youngest 17. "For one thing, I have learned to tell it straight. Directness gets a direct response."

SHE FOUND A common bond and similar goals with others in the class, and realized that her problems were not unique. With increased self-confidence, she had decided to continue exploring education, perhaps work toward a degree.

Another woman, previously quiet and unassuming, was surprised to discover through the class that she had things to say that people want to hear. "It has been a very positive experience for me," she said. "I learned to accept and enjoy strokes." Mother of two youngsters, 7 and 9, somewhat of a perfectionist, she came to realize that previously she had set unrealistic goals for herself. She intends now to continue in speech, art and communication courses.

Lining better than underlining for sheer bridesmaid dresses

Dear Mrs. Farmer,

I'll be getting married this spring and would like to start sewing my attendants' dresses early. We have selected Simplicity Pattern 7229 and would like to make the jacket out of sheer fabric to match the overlay of the dress. How do I finish the seams, hems, and ruffles? What type of underlining should I use for sheer fabrics?—Darlene P.

Dar Darlene,

You have chosen one of my favorite patterns for your bridesmaids. I think they will also enjoy the dresses after the wedding.

As to underlining the dresses, I would suggest using a free hanging lining instead, to reserve the lovely, airy, sheer fabric. On this particular pattern, I would underline only the halter bodice. Your separate lining could be attached to the seamline at the Empire line. The hems of both would be finished separately, using a narrow machine-stitched hem.

For the sheer jacket which will not be lined, you could finish the seams with French seaming,concealing the cut edges altogether, or use two rows of stitching on each seam. The latter is usually found on ready-made garments.

Don't press the stitched seams open, instead, stitch a second row of machine stitching about one-fourth inch from the first. Cut away any excess fabric from the seam allowance.

This double stitching reinforces all seams and can also be done for the set-in sleeves. You could also over-cast the seams with your machine, but most machines have a tendency to tighten up the seam which would give it a puckered effect.

by Eunice Farmer

The edges of the ruffles could be finished with the "lettuce-leaf" finish since they are cut on the bias, or just a narrow stitched hem.

You are wise to begin your project early. Most fabrics you will probably want to use cannot be reordered by your store if you wait until late in the Spring to decide. All of you lucky girls who will be making plans to be married this spring or summer make your fabric selections right after the holidays for the widest choice of patterns and color.

Today's winner of a set of gold blazer buttons is Mrs. Peggy Mennett, 624 W. Jewel, Kirkwood, Mo. 63122.

Here's her winning "Sew Simple Sewing Tip."

"When a pattern calls for making a waistline casing for either elastic or a drawstring, I have always been unhappy with the results every time I have to cross the seam. The seam usually pushes to one side of the seam allowance preventing easy insertion.

To prevent this, iron a narrow strip of stitch witchery, double the length of the casing, onto both sides of the seam allowance. This keeps the seam permanently flat and smooth, facilitating the passage of elastic with ease. This tip could apply to a casing in any area of your garments."

Dear Eunice Farmer,

I have one hip that is much higher than the other, causing skirt hems to ride up. This also happens when I wear slacks. I recently went to a sewing clinic, but they didn't help with my individual problem. Also, since I am short, could you please tell me how long a jacket should be for me?—Mrs. R. T.

Dear Mrs. R. T.,

For the problem of one hip being much higher than the other, your adjustment must be made at the waistline of the pants or skirts before applying the waistband. Never adjust this at the hemline.

The simplest way to adjust your pattern is to make a basic pattern out of horizontal, striped fabric or make your own horizontal lines on solid fabric. This will show you exactly how much fabric needs to be added to accommodate the high hip since the grainline must remain straight. When you see how much is needed, it will actually be curved up gradually from center front to one side, and the center back, to the same side.

It is best to cover up this adjustment with straight jackets or overblouses. As to the length of jackets for you, this would depend entirely on your proportion, not just your height. It could vary for each of us.

The best way is to experiment by folding up your pattern at different lengths and trying it on over the pants or skirt you will be wearing.

Artery spasm caused temporary paralysis

I was in the hospital for a week. On the doctor's form for medicare it said I have "cerebrovascular spasm and transient left hemiplegia." It sounds so ominous. Would you comment on it in your column? I am 76 years old, a female and until recently quite active. What can I do to combat this illness?

The term means that your doctor thinks you had spasm of one of the arteries that supply blood to part of your brain. The temporary inadequate circulation to a portion of your brain caused temporary paralysis of your left side. Apparently it was of short duration and you recovered from the attack.

Some doctors call these attacks "transitory ischemic episodes" or TIA's. The exact cause it not certain. Some authorities think it is a spasm, as was stated in your case. Other authorities think it is caused by the breaking off of small clots that seed to the brain and cause a temporary blockage of small vessels in the brain.

What can you do about it? There is no one answer that applies to all cases. Some doctors have had good results in giving patients long term anti-clotting medicines. Even the daily use of common aspirin is under study for this purpose. However not enough facts are available yet to recommend aspirin regularly for public use.

If a person has high blood pressure, it is well to control it. This is true anyway even without such episodes.

Patients with such an episode deserve careful study to determine if they have an underlying problem that needs treatment. In some cases of disease in arteries in the neck area surgery is helpful. Such decisions can only be made on a basis of fairly complex studies of the individual patient.

Otherwise there is very little you can do for yourself. Many people have such an episode or even more than one and then have no further difficulty for long periods of time thereafter. To give you more information on such episodes I am sending you The Health Letter number 2-5, Strokes: Cerebral Vascular Accident — Cerebral Thromsosis. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Just send your letter to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

When my boy was born, the hospital circumcised him. Will this procedure prevent him from having children of his own? I figure that maybe he will not have the sensitivity in that area that he would need.

As a doctor I sometimes don't even think of some of the things people without a similar background might worry about. Frankly it would never have occurred to me that anyone would think that circumcision would prevent a man from being fully potent and normal sexually. I can assure you that the frequency of circumcision and the current birth rate clearly eliminate any possibility that circumcisions would prevent fertility. Your fears are completely unfounded. Your son will yave the same opportunity as any uncircumcised boy to father children.

Have a cheese ball ready for visitors

With people wandering in and out this time of season, stopping by to spread the cheer, one of the smartest things any household can have on hand in the refrigerator is a cheese ball. People who get the habit usually have one on hand all the time — to top hamburgers, put into salads, use as an hors d'oeuvre or as the basis of salad dressing — even to top cooked vegetables. Just mix together eight ounces of Roquefort or blue cheese, three ounces of cream cheese, a teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce and about two-plus tablespoons of butter or margarine. This last ingredient not only adds taste, but makes it easily spreadable on crackers.

Dear Dorothy: I've become the No. 1 fan of that foam florists use for their arrangements. All you need to do is soak it for a few hours, then squeeze out the excess water. I buy it at the florist's shop along with sticky green tape. Just try it with a favorite vase. Pour the water in, then use the foam about half way up and stick the flower stems through the foam into the water. The tape serves as the anchoring agent. —Glenda Miller

Dear Dorothy: We live in a tri-level house and the storage closets are on the first floor. When I went to check the winter clothes, I was shocked to see mildew spots on several of the washable polyester knits. Airing them did nothing. Decided to experiment, rather than send everything to the cleaner. So made a paste of a liquid detergent and the popular oxygen bleach and rubbed the spots with a washcloth dipped in this. Then I thoroughly rinsed the garment in a pail of cold water and let it dry. Laundered, the garment turned out beautifully — and I moved on to do the rest the same way. —Bernice Epstein

Shots good only for red measles

Parents planning to have their children vaccinated at Tuesday's emergency measles clinic at the Randhurst Shopping Center should be aware that the shot protects only against red measles, not rubella (German measles), health officials say.

The Cook County Public Health Dept. is offering the free shots in response to a county red measles outbreak which may have affected more than 1,200 persons, most of them in south suburban junior and senior high schools. As of last week, 25 cases had been reported in the north and Northwest suburbs.

According to Dr. John B. Hall, medical director of the department, "the real problem is with the red measles. There have been few reported cases of rubella, but those who aren't sure if they have received the vaccine for rubella should check with their physician or come to one of our clinics."

RUBELLA, transmitted to young women of child-bearing age, is the greatest cause of infant birth defects, but the disease is fairly mild to the child experiencing it. Rubella is characterized by a slight fever, a rash which lasts three days and large lumps at the back of the neck.

A vaccine for rubella was developed in 1971, Dr. Hall said, and is now administered to children under age 15 months in a combination measles, mumps and rubella shot, he said. If a woman is unsure whether she has had the disease, a blood test will indicate whether a vaccination is needed, he added.

Unlike rubella, red measles is a "a very serious, ugly desease" in the child who contracts it, and Dr. Colette Rasmussen, chief of preventative medicine for the county health department. The disease starts with a fever, cough and runny nose, which lasts from two to five days. A rash appears on the sixth day and lasts for about four more days. Approximately one out of 100 cases needs hospitalization, and one out of 12 victims develops complications ranging from pneumonia to brain damage, she said.

THE RECENT outbreak of red measles is due to several factors, Dr. Rasmussen said. The vaccine that was used during the 1960s is no longer effective in many cases, and high school students immunized during that period may be affected.

Another cause of the outbreak is inconsistent enforcement of state and local vaccination requirements. While children starting school need evidence of immunity against diptheria, whooping cough, tetanus, polio, red measles and rubella, (German measles), many slip by without the proper protection.

"Children transferring into the school system may never send their records; schools may have a shortage of help and let a signed physical suffice. By the time you add it all up, there are a lot of susceptible children out there," she said.

BECAUSE OF THE nature of measles, many parents may assume their children have had the disease when a simple rash may have produced similar symptoms, she added.

While the emergency red measles clinic is open only to children under age 18, young adults between the ages of 18 and 24 are also urged to consult their family physician if they have not been immunized, were immunized before their first birthday or received the vaccine before 1969.

The disease is being contracted by an increasing number of older children, Dr. Rasmussen added.

Emergency clinics held recently at Alsip and South Holland attracted 3500 people each, which Dr. Rasmussen termed a good turnout. She said the recent brouhaha over suspension of the swine flu program had no measurable effect on the attendance.

For more information on the clinic or vaccination procedures, readers should call the health department in Des Plaines at 298-5800.

AT HARPER COLLEGE, Palatine, the Women's Program is offered on a somewhat different basis. The one-class-a-week, non-credit courses, which also begin the week of Jan. 17, span an eight weeks period.

A good jumping-off point for women who want to take the first step of reentry into the academic or business world is "Personal Awareness: Investigation into Identity." In this course, a woman is encouraged to investigate herself as a person as opposed to a role or category and to ascertain her own value system.

Registration is also in progress for this course, and women may call the Harper Women's Program office after Jan. 1, 397-3000, Ext. 560, for details.

"It's incredible the number of people who do not know themselves as people," said Rena Trevor, Women's Program coordinator. " 'Investigation into Identity' helps bridge the transitional period for women who want to make more definite commitments about what they will do with their lives."

Pet control

Condominium boards can legally make rules to control pets and even forbid them, says William D. Sally, general manager of the property management division of a Chicago company.

The Baird and Warner, Inc. executive said pet restrictions or the power of the condominium to impose them is enforceable if it is in the original declaration and by-laws prepared by the developer. He urges prospective buyers to examine the by-laws before signing up for condominium property. (UPI)

What can you do about it? There is no one answer that applies to all cases. Some doctors have had good results in giving patients long term anti-clotting medicines. Even the daily use of common aspirin is under study for this purpose. However not enough facts are available yet to recommend aspirin regularly for public use.

If a person has high blood pressure, it is well to control it. This is true anyway even without such episodes.

Patients with such an episode deserve careful study to determine if they have an underlying problem that needs treatment. In some cases of disease in arteries in the neck area surgery is helpful. Such decisions can only be made on a basis of fairly complex studies of the individual patient.

Otherwise there is very little you can do for yourself. Many people have such an episode or even more than one and then have no further difficulty for long periods of time thereafter. To give you more information on such episodes I am sending you The Health Letter number 2-5, Strokes: Cerebral Vascular Accident — Cerebral Thromsosis. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Just send your letter to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

When my boy was born, the hospital circumcised him. Will this procedure prevent him from having children of his own? I figure that maybe he will not have the sensitivity in that area that he would need.

As a doctor I sometimes don't even think of some of the things people without a similar background might worry about. Frankly it would never have occurred to me that anyone would think that circumcision would prevent a man from being fully potent and normal sexually. I can assure you that the frequency of circumcision and the current birth rate clearly eliminate any possibility that circumcisions would prevent fertility. Your fears are completely unfounded. Your son will yave the same opportunity as any uncircumcised boy to father children.

Have a cheese ball ready for visitors

With people wandering in and out this time of season, stopping by to spread the cheer, one of the smartest things any household can have on hand in the refrigerator is a cheese ball. People who get the habit usually have one on hand all the time — to top hamburgers, put into salads, use as an hors d'oeuvre or as the basis of salad dressing — even to top cooked vegetables. Just mix together eight ounces of Roquefort or blue cheese, three ounces of cream cheese, a teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce and about two-plus tablespoons of butter or margarine. This last ingredient not only adds taste, but makes it easily spreadable on crackers.

Dear Dorothy: I've become the No. 1 fan of that foam florists use for their arrangements. All you need to do is soak it for a few hours, then squeeze out the excess water. I buy it at the florist's shop along with sticky green tape. Just try it with a favorite vase. Pour the water in, then use the foam about half way up and stick the flower stems through the foam into the water. The tape serves as the anchoring agent. —Glenda Miller

Dear Dorothy: We live in a tri-level house and the storage closets are on the first floor. When I went to check the winter clothes, I was shocked to see mildew spots on several of the washable polyester knits. Airing them did nothing. Decided to experiment, rather than send everything to the cleaner. So made a paste of a liquid detergent and the popular oxygen bleach and rubbed the spots with a washcloth dipped in this. Then I thoroughly rinsed the garment in a pail of cold water and let it dry. Laundered, the garment turned out beautifully — and I moved on to do the rest the same way. —Bernice Epstein

Parents planning to have their children vaccinated at Tuesday's emergency measles clinic at the Randhurst Shopping Center should be aware that the shot protects only against red measles, not rubella (German measles), health officials say.

The Cook County Public Health Dept. is offering the free shots in response to a county red measles outbreak which may have affected more than 1,200 persons, most of them in south suburban junior and senior high schools. As of last week, 25 cases had been reported in the north and Northwest suburbs.

According to Dr. John B. Hall, medical director of the department, "the real problem is with the red measles. There have been few reported cases of rubella, but those who aren't sure if they have received the vaccine for rubella should check with their physician or come to one of our clinics."

RUBELLA, transmitted to young women of child-bearing age, is the greatest cause of infant birth defects, but the disease is fairly mild to the child experiencing it. Rubella is characterized by a slight fever, a rash which lasts three days and large lumps at the back of the neck.

A vaccine for rubella was developed in 1971, Dr. Hall said, and is now administered to children under age 15 months in a combination measles, mumps and rubella shot, he said. If a woman is unsure whether she has had the disease, a blood test will indicate whether a vaccination is needed, he added.

Unlike rubella, red measles is a "a very serious, ugly desease" in the child who contracts it, and Dr. Colette Rasmussen, chief of preventative medicine for the county health department. The disease starts with a fever, cough and runny nose, which lasts from two to five days. A rash appears on the sixth day and lasts for about four more days. Approximately one out of 100 cases needs hospitalization, and one out of 12 victims develops complications ranging from pneumonia to brain damage, she said.

THE RECENT outbreak of red measles is due to several factors, Dr. Rasmussen said. The vaccine that was used during the 1960s is no longer effective in many cases, and high school students immunized during that period may be affected.

Another cause of the outbreak is inconsistent enforcement of state and local vaccination requirements. While children starting school need evidence of immunity against diptheria, whooping cough, tetanus, polio, red measles and rubella, (German measles), many slip by without the proper protection.

"Children transferring into the school system may never send their records; schools may have a shortage of help and let a signed physical suffice. By the time you add it all up, there are a lot of susceptible children out there," she said.

BECAUSE OF THE nature of measles, many parents may assume their children have had the disease when a simple rash may have produced similar symptoms, she added.

While the emergency red measles clinic is open only to children under age 18, young adults between the ages of 18 and 24 are also urged to consult their family physician if they have not been immunized, were immunized before their first birthday or received the vaccine before 1969.

The disease is being contracted by an increasing number of older children, Dr. Rasmussen added.

Emergency clinics held recently at Alsip and South Holland attracted 3500 people each, which Dr. Rasmussen termed a good turnout. She said the recent brouhaha over suspension of the swine flu program had no measurable effect on the attendance.

For more information on the clinic or vaccination procedures, readers should call the health department in Des Plaines at 298-5800.

Especially for women

ules, locations, tuition rates or other information may call 967-5120, Ext. 350. Registration is already under way.

AT HARPER COLLEGE, Palatine, the Women's Program is offered on a somewhat different basis. The one-class-a-week, non-credit courses, which also begin the week of Jan. 17, span an eight weeks period.

A good jumping-off point for women who want to take the first step of reentry into the academic or business world is "Personal Awareness: Investigation into Identity." In this course, a woman is encouraged to investigate herself as a person as opposed to a role or category and to ascertain her own value system.

Registration is also in progress for this course, and women may call the Harper Women's Program office after Jan. 1, 397-3000, Ext. 560, for details.

"It's incredible the number of people who do not know themselves as people," said Rena Trevor, Women's Program coordinator. " 'Investigation into Identity' helps bridge the transitional period for women who want to make more definite commitments about what they will do with their lives."

Pet control

Condominium boards can legally make rules to control pets and even forbid them, says William D. Sally, general manager of the property management division of a Chicago company.

The Baird and Warner, Inc. executive said pet restrictions or the power of the condominium to impose them is enforceable if it is in the original declaration and by-laws prepared by the developer. He urges prospective buyers to examine the by-laws before signing up for condominium property. (UPI)

Cell errors cause aging?

by ROBERT MUSEL

There is a theory that living things grow old because the cells of the body begin to make errors as time goes by. Scientists call it "the error catastrophe."

New evidence that it actually occurs came recently from a research group at the Mill Hill laboratories in London.

Although there are other theories of aging, the catastrophe supporters say mistakes are bound to happen as cells go through the cycles of making proteins out of nucleic acid and nucleic acid out of proteins. The mistakes are magnified from cycle to cycle and eventually the cell is unable to perform its assigned function and dies.

ACCORDING TO the catastrophists, there is some confirmation of the theory that cellular age is related to length of life in the fact that cells in persons suffering from diseases which cause premature aging die sooner than other cells.

The magazine New Scientist said a research team under Robin Holliday, studying fibroplasts (cells in connective tissues), found a rapid increase in faults over the 60 or 70 cycles of the reproductive process before death.

Other members of the research team, working with DNA, the substance of life itself, found that after about 50 cycles there were visible signs of senility in the cells of the enzymes used in the experiments. At that point the cell rate of activity was 80 per cent down.

AT THE SAME time, the aging enzymes tended to combine with the wrong nucleotides several times more often than youthful cells.

Similar findings on the multiplication of mistakes as cells age has been reported by Randall Barton and a team at the University of Tennessee who made an intensive study of liver DNA polymerase from old mice.

New Scientist commented;

"Of course it is possible that something else gets the animal before the error catastrophe does, but all the evidence is now that an error catastrophe does happen."

Cell errors cause aging?

by ROBERT MUSEL

There is a theory that living things grow old because the cells of the body begin to make errors as time goes by. Scientists call it "the error catastrophe."

New evidence that it actually occurs came recently from a research group at the Mill Hill laboratories in London.

Although there are other theories of aging, the catastrophe supporters say mistakes are bound to happen as cells go through the cycles of making proteins out of nucleic acid and nucleic acid out of proteins. The mistakes are magnified from cycle to cycle and eventually the cell is unable to perform its assigned function and dies.

ACCORDING TO the catastrophists, there is some confirmation of the theory that cellular age is related to length of life in the fact that cells in persons suffering from diseases which cause premature aging die sooner than other cells.

The magazine New Scientist said a research team under Robin Holliday, studying fibroplasts (cells in connective tissues), found a rapid increase in faults over the 60 or 70 cycles of the reproductive process before death.

Other members of the research team, working with DNA, the substance of life itself, found that after about 50 cycles there were visible signs of senility in the cells of the enzymes used in the experiments. At that point the cell rate of activity was 80 per cent down.

AT THE SAME time, the aging enzymes tended to combine with the wrong nucleotides several times more often than youthful cells.

Similar findings on the multiplication of mistakes as cells age has been reported by Randall Barton and a team at the University of Tennessee who made an intensive study of liver DNA polymerase from old mice.

New Scientist commented;

"Of course it is possible that something else gets the animal before the error catastrophe does, but all the evidence is now that an error catastrophe does happen."

Shades of Harpo, Chico and Groucho

It can be hot stuff, that clowning in the streets

NEW YORK (UPI) — Karen Gresch was under the table and didn't know what was happening. Jessica Hentoff's rubber gloves were on fire and Claudia Constant was running around trying to stomp out flames.

The crowd roared with laughter.

"We had never gotten such a response from the audience," Karen says. "I wondered what was going on. I didn't know what was happening."

It was one of the hazards of the trade. Karen, Jessica and Claudia are clowns who include fire eating in their act. In the last year they have clowned and juggled their way across the continent from the Olympics in Montreal to California and now, back to New York.

THEY CALL themselves Triplopy. It means triple vision.

It was at a California amusement park that Karen — who, with a board across her front, bends over backward to become a table — knocked over the fuel for the fire-eating act.

On thing led to another and Karen and Jessica soon were aflame, and Claudia was trying to stomp out the fire.

The audience thought that it was part of the act. Maybe someday, if they can perfect it, it will be.

Fortunately, there were no injuries and because only the fuel burned, there was no damage to the group's property. It made Jessica think of her mother's fears.

Because of her fire-eating, Jessica says, "My mother is sure that I'll have an early death."

TRIPLOPY GOT its start in 1974 when Jessica and Claudia, now both 21, became interested in clowning while taking circus classes in college at Purchase, N.Y. They organized a juggling act of their own, and that summer the two New Yorkers found a vacation job with the Circus Kingdom.

Karen, 25, holds a fine arts degree from Pace College. She has been involved in performing in one way or another since she was 13 and became interested in clowning through persons she met while working as a magician's assistant.

Karen went to work with a group called Piccolo Circus and met Jessica and Claudia when the two went to watch a performance of that outfit.

Since then, Triplopy has appeared on stage (recently at the Courtyard Playhouse in New York) and television (Sun Up, a San Diego morning program). But they've made their real income from impromptu street performances where they depend on the charity of equally impromptu audiences.

They say street work provides an "erratic income." But working the streets and plazas of Montreal during the Olympics this past summer, they were able to make over a thousand dollars. "It was enough money to get us to California," Jessica says.

HAVING EXPERIENCED the audiences in Montreal, they were able to make a comparison with the street audiences of New York, where they usually work.

"The people of Montreal were very kind and receptive," Karen says. "In New York it can be tough. You can draw some rather hostile crowds."

The three produced their own show at the Courtyard Playhouse. They had planned to add another week but the absence of backers prevented it.

Bringing up Fido means giving time, care, study

NEW YORK — Lots of puppies find new homes at holiday time.

If you're received a puppy, don't get carried away with the sentiment surrounding the season.

A puppy is a very special gift, but one that takes much consideration because of its unique status. A puppy is a puppy. It's not a Cher doll.

IF YOU GOT a purebred dog, you should learn, from studying the breed, how the pup is likely to look and act. In addition, you should study his personality type.

Some dogs are leader-types. They need a strong, gentle hand and a fairly calm all-adult household. Some dogs are natural loners and don't adjust well to family living. Fairly curious, affectionate dogs which are reasonbly good followers generally make the best pets in a household with children. The very submissive pets are happier with older owners.

Make a stop at the veterinarian's. This is important, for if the animal has a defect, you probably will want to return it. A diseased puppy may introduce germs which can be caught by another animal.

After the veterinarian has assured you of your animal's good health, you should discuss three things with him: diet, immunizations and neutering.

Your animal's doctor will help you select a food which is nutritionally complete and sustains growth in puppies. (A food sufficient to maintain an adult dog may not be sufficient for a puppy, with his greater needs.)

The veterinarian or your favorite pet shop also may suggest a food which is lower in residue than most so that your dog will produce less fecal matter, which is firmer and easier to dispose of. This is important, whether you live in a friendly rural neighborhood or on a congested city block — nobody needs any extra mess.

LET THE VETERINARIAN establish a program for worming and inoculations. Cooperate with him by sticking to his dates.

Make him feel at home with a little warm milk — then later, a little of the same kind of food he's accustomed to in his birthplace. Don't overdo it — a young animal is liable to gorge himself, to his ultimate sorrow — and yours. A portable radio turned on low may make his sleeping area seem more like home.

Immmediately establish his permanent bed and a temporary area to be used during housebreaking. It takes most dogs about six weeks to be completely housetrained. Up until then, it's wisest to confine the dog to easily washable quarters, such as the kitchen or laundry room.

If a puppy is adjusting well, you will not need to visit the veterinarian until the date you have agreed on for further treatment. At that time, review his diet. Is he getting enough of the right kind of food?

Sometimes the veterinarian decides that the animal is not prospering on a food, although it is excellent for normal animals. He may suggest a prescribed prepared diet. Such foods exist to help in the treatment of food-related allergy, intestinal disability and overweight. (For older dogs, there are foods which help with kidney, liver or heart trouble.)

After your pet has successfully navigated his first year, you can switch to a once-a-year schedule with your veterinairan — provided the pet remains in good health. Regular visits are important, for through them, conditions can be caught early and treatment started.

Stage is set! Minnesota, Oakland reach Super Bowl

From Herald Wire Services

It will be Minnesota against Oakland in the National Football League's Super Bowl at Pasadena, Calif. Jan. 9.

At Bloomington, Minn. the Vikings surged into a record fourth Super Bowl berth Sunday, capitalizing on Bobby Bryant's 90-yard run with a blocked field goal attempt and Chuck Foreman's 118-yard rushing performance for a 24-13 victory over the Los Angeles Rams in the National Football Conference title game.

Meanwhile in California Ken Stabler, whose passing was the key to success in the regular season, threw two scoring strikes in a bitter struggle to lead the Raiders to a 24-7 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers in the American Football Conference championship contest and a spot in the Super Bowl for first time in nine years.

BRYANT'S RUN triggered the Vikings to their 10th victory against one loss and two ties over the Rams at home. Bryant also had a key interception with 2:28 remaining to send the Rams to their third straight loss in an NFC title game. The Vikings have never lost a conference title game.

Foreman, held in check in the first half, had a 62-yard run early in the third quarter to set up his one-yard touchdown plunge and Fred Cox kicked a 25-yard field goal for the Vikings. Foreman also set up the Vikings' final touchdown — a 12-yard run by Sammy Johnson — with a 57-yard run on a screen pass from Fran Tarkenton in the waning minutes of play.

Los Angeles, which trailed 17-0 late in the third period, scored twice in the last five minutes of the quarter on Lawrence McCutcheon's 10-yard run and Pat Haden's five-yard pass to Harold Jackson.

Minnesota twice stopped the Rams in Viking territory in the fourth quarter, once on Wally Hilgenberg's key sack on third down and the second time on Bryant's interception on a pass intended for Ron Jessie.

STABLER THREW a four-yard touchdown pass to second string tight end Warren Bankston and a five-yarder to reserve running back Pete Banaszak as Oakland rolled to victory over the two-time defending Super bowl champion Steelers.

The Steelers, who three times in the last four years prevented the Raiders from advancing to the NFL championship game, played without running backs Franco Harris and Rocky Bleier because of injuries suffered a week ago in a runaway playoff triumph over Baltimore. Each had gained more than 1,000 yards rushing during the regular season.

The victory was the 12th straight for the Raiders as Oakland had the best regular season record in the NFL at 13-1.

The Steelers had won 10 straight entering the AFC championship, but were no match for the Raiders without Harris and Bleier.

CLARENCE DAVIS ran a yard for Oakland's other touchdown and Errol Mann kicked a 39-yard field goal to account for the other Raider points. The Steelers, who went into the game as 4½-point favorites, got their only score on a three-yard run by reserve Reggie Harrison.

The Oakland defense did an excellent job of shutting off the Pittsburgh running game and was equally effective in harassing quarterback Terry Bradshaw, who often had to throw on the run. Bradshaw threw more than he usually does. The first 10 Raider points came on defense plays by Hubie Ginn, Ted Hendricks and Willie Hall.

Ginn partially blocked a punt by Bobby Walden to give the Raiders possession at the Pittsburgh 38 and, seven plays later, Mann kicked his field goal to put Oakland ahead, 3-0, in the fourth minute of the game.

As things turned out the Raiders never would be behind in a game that was as physical as expected, but relatively free of penalties.

THAWING FROM the 14 degree chill at Bloomington and asked to compare his present championship team to the three Viking teams in previous Super Bowls, Minnesota coach Bud Grant said, "It has a lot more firepower offensively and it has an added dimension — emotion.

"Not that we haven't had emotion in the past. Nobody is more emotional than Jim Marshall or Carl Eller. But the other teams had a more mature kind of emotion. This team is younger and the younger players have contributed an exuberant type of enthusiasm."

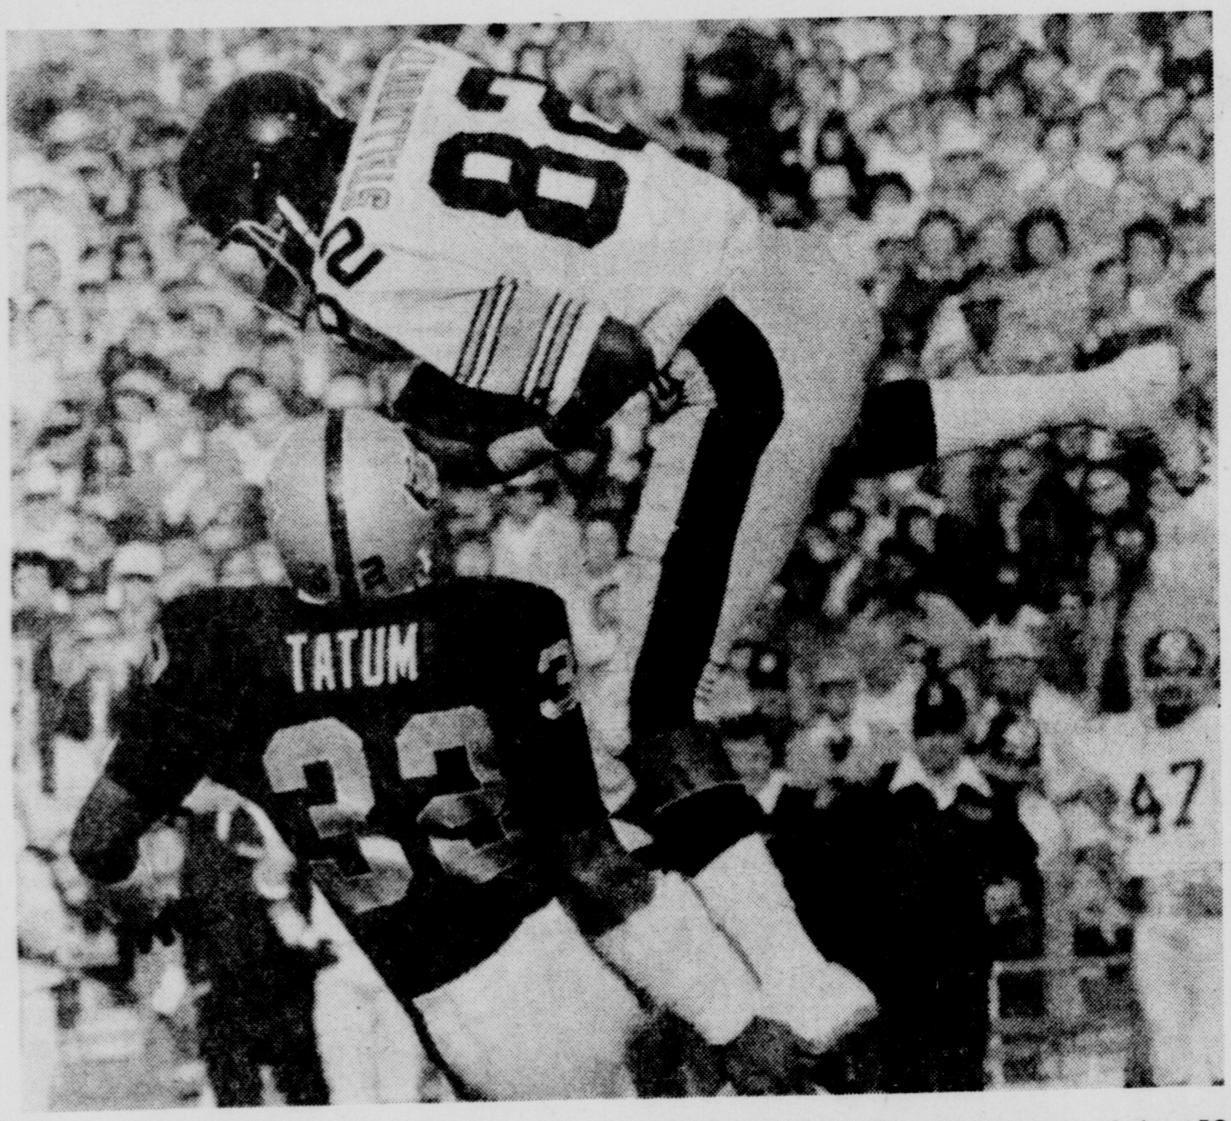
Back at Oakland, Raider coach John Madden felt his team would have won even with Harris and Bleier in the Steeler lineup. He said this year's club was perhaps the best he has ever coached.

"This team overcame a lot of adversity," Madden said, "and all year long it had to live with the stigma of never making it in the big games. They have been a very dedicated bunch all year, doing what they had to do to win."

PITTSBURGH COACH Chuck Noll disagreed with Madden, saying his team would have won if Harris and Bleier were sound.

"I'm sorry we didn't have a few more weapons (Harris and Bleier)," Noll said. "They're 50 per cent of our offense. If they were in, we would have won.

NO GOAL LINE STAND for this post, being torn down by a mob of jubliant Minnesota fans following their team's 23-13 win over Los Angeles in the NFC championship contest Sunday.



SOARING STEELER. Pittsburgh wide receiver John Stallworth leaves terra firma to haul in a Terry Bradshaw pass despite the efforts of Oakland's Jack Tatum during the second quarter of the AFC championship game Sunday. The flashy reception led to a Steeler score but the Raiders prevailed anyway, 24-7.

There's holiday basketball

Everywhere you look...

by ART MUGALIAN

The area's basketball coaches looked under the tree on Christmas morning and what they hoped to find was a 6-10 center, a couple of high-jumping, good-shooting forwards, or a 6-3 guard who can break a press.

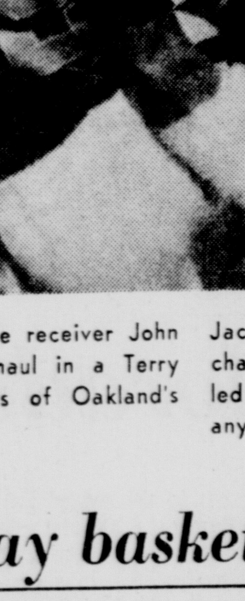
What each one found instead was, invariably, a cordial invitation to one of the state's numerous Christmas basketball tournaments, Santa's answer to the age-old cage question: What can we do to keep busy during the holiday?

THE BOREDOM OF turkey and stuffing and tinsel will give way to the excitement of hot basketball action for every area team today and for the rest of the week. Every team is involved somewhere — and every team will be looking to improve its record or, at the very least, firm up its starting lineup as the new year approaches.

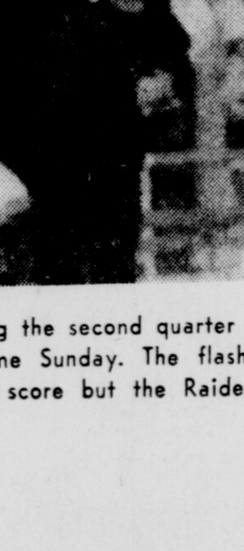
Here is a chance at each team's chances:

Arlington — The Cardinals (6-3) tip off against Salem at 10:00 tonight in the Centralia Tourney where Homewood-Flossmoor is being touted as the favorite. Arlington's quickness and defensive abilities, plus 6-3 Dave Kamps, will weigh in its favor here. Suburban teams from Evanston, Marist, Elgin-Larkin, Lane Tech and Rich East are also entered in this tournament.

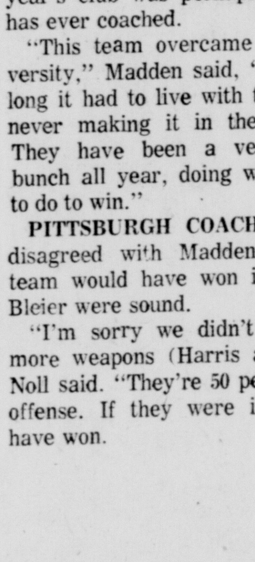
Buffalo Grove — Paul Grady's Bison (9-1) could very well be the team to beat at Rockford Boylan, especially now that 6-8 senior Brian Allsmiller is on the mend. The Bison must get past first-round opponent Carver at 2 p.m. today. An eventual title showdown with East St. Louis is a possibility for Buffalo Grove.



T.R. Frye



Craig Rawlins



Kevin McKenna

Palatine — The Pirates, led by 6-6 senior Kevin McKenna, will face Rock Island in their first-round battle at Rockford Boylan at 3:30 today. Palatine (2-6) is beginning to come around for new coach Ed Molitor, who was pleased with the Pirates' victory over Wheeling in the Mid-Suburban North opener last week. McKenna is averaging 22 points a game, but Palatine will need a strong team effort to head off Rock Island (6-2).

Wheeling — A 4 p.m. match against St. Joseph is on the slate for Ted Ecker's Wheeling Wildcats (1-8) at the Proviso West Tournament, billed as one of the strongest in the state. If the 'Cats win, they would go against the winner of the LaGrange vs. Zion-Benton game. Brian Begrowicz and sophomore Jim Sabel lead Wheeling.

Rolling Meadows — The Mustangs draw defending state champion Morgan Park in a 7:45 opener tonight. Coach Bill Weinberg's Meadows' gang (5-3) is in the thick of the MSL South race and might be able to run with the M.P. Mustangs, who were wracked by graduation.

Rolling Meadows relies heavily on a fast-break offense led by Bob Rose and Kent Walker.

Hoffman Estates — The Hawks (5-4) encounter New Trier West tonight at 9:30 in the Elgin Tourney, then could run up against Elgin, Barrington or Gordon Tech in a tough-looking 16-team affair. The top bracket includes Hirsch, Mundelein, Ridgewood, and Stevenson, which opens against Downers Grove North at 8:45 a.m. today.

Fremd — Mo Tharp's Vikings debut against Barrington at 6 p.m. today. Fremd (3-5) has lost some hard-luck games already this season and the Vikes will be facing a Barrington team that has won its share of close decisions. Fremd is led by a trio of high-scorers — Jeff Curtin, Craig Rawlins, and Dale Hallberg.

Hersey — Hersey's opener against Joliet Catholic at 9:00 tonight in the York tourney will be a major test for the Huskies (3-5), who are led by pint-sized guards T.R. Frye and Joey Pusatera. Coach Roger Steingraber is

Baseball deals astonish Paige

BY JIM COUR

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — In the middle of the 1948 season, Satchel Paige left the Kansas City Monarchs and entered the white baseball world.

Jackie Robinson, a former teammate with the Monarchs, broke the color barrier in the major leagues the year before with the Brooklyn Dodgers.

With his Cleveland Indians making a run for the American League championship, Bill Veeck brought in Paige. Paige, then officially 42, became the first black to pitch in the American League. Appearing in 21 games, he posted a 6-1 record and the Indians won the pennant and the World Series.

FOR THAT effort, he was paid $25,000, the most money he ever earned in a single season.

Now, officially 70, Paige is watching with astonishment as baseball's owners hand out million dollar, multi-year contracts to free agents as if there's no bottom to the money well.

At the winter baseball meetings here, Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley estimated that six of his former players — Sal Bando, Bert Campaneris, Rollie Fingers, Gene Tenace, Joe Rudi and Don Baylor — had received pacts totaling $9.2 million from their new clubs after playing out their options.

In his heydey, when blacks were confined to Negro baseball, Paige was a name with charisma. He had a blazing fastball and showmanship. He was an old-time Mark "The Bird" Fidrych — and then some. He liked to call his fastball by various sobriquets, including a bee ball, a jump ball and a trouble ball.

"WHAT'S HAPPENING could be a ruination of baseball." Paige declared. "I'm happy for the players but it doesn't take a genius to figure out that the owners are going to run out of money unless they stop paying these huge salaries.

"It's similar to the bonus baby situation you had in the 1950s. You can't give one player a million dollars and not expect the rest of them to want the same kind of money.

"They're going to have to charge the fans $30 to $40 a game if they keep giving these kind of salaries and you know the fans won't pay that kind of money to see games."

Paige appeared at television station KCET in Hollywood for an appearance on the TV series "The Way It Was," sponsored by Mobil for Public Broadcasting Service. The segment will be shown next year.

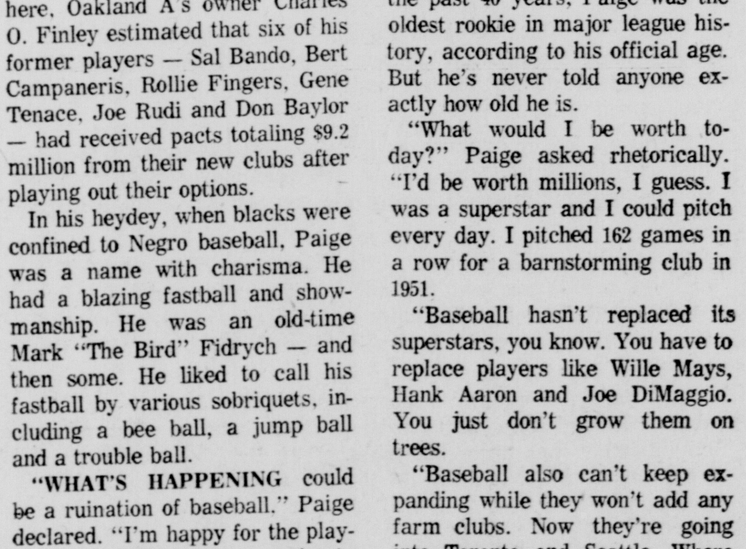
PAIGE, A long, lean pitcher with a whip-like right arm and pencil-thin legs, looked the fittest — and maybe the youngest — of the seven ex-players. He didn't have a gray hair in his head and there didn't appear to be an ounce of fat on his body.

A resident of Kansas City for the past 40 years, Paige was the oldest rookie in major league history, according to his official age. But he's never told anyone exactly how old he is.

"What would I be worth today?" Paige asked rhetorically. "I'd be worth millions, I guess. I was a superstar and I could pitch every day. I pitched 162 games in a row for a barnstorming club in 1951.

"Baseball hasn't replaced its superstars, you know. You have to replace players like Wille Mays, Hank Aaron and Joe DiMaggio. You just don't grow them on trees.

"Baseball also can't keep expanding while they won't add any farm clubs. Now they're going into Toronto and Seattle. Where are they going to get the players from?"



Satchel Paige, now officially 70 years old.

Future

Allen ponders tomorrow with Redskins

by SAM FOGG

WASHINGTON (UPI) — George Allen did something this weekend he prefers not to do — spend Christmas with his family — and weigh the future with the Washington Redskins.

The 54-year-old head coach is a perfectly solid husband and father but he has always declared he'd rather be at work, coaching a Super Bowl contender in the playoffs during the holidays, than watching rival teams play on television.

The Minnesota Vikings confined him to family quarters this year by eliminating the Redskins 35-20 in the first round of the playoffs. The defeat also stirred a flurry of speculation that Allen might not return in 1977 to complete the last season of his seven-year contract.

BUT REDSKINS president Edward Bennett Williams announced after conferring with majority stockholder Jack Kent Cooke that Allen will be offered an extension of his contract and a pay raise. His present salary is estimated at about $150,000 annually, including fringe benefits.

"He has done a superb job of coaching for the last six years," Williams said of Allen, who has compiled a 58-25-1 record with Washington and taken the team to the playoffs in five of the six seasons.

"I've been happy in Washington . . . We've got a good football team and I think we can continue to win," Allen, one of four active NFL coaches with a lifetime record of more than 100 victories, said in anticipation of negotiations.

But after a 10-4 season, Allen and his aides face problems of major dimensions.

FIRST, Washington's "Over-the-Hill Gang" will be another year older next season. Wide receiver Roy Jefferson is expected to call it a career at age 33.

At least five of Allen's seasoned veterans are weighing the pros and cons of retirement — all - pro linebacker Chris Hanburger, 35, and the owner of a new auto agency; cornerback Pat Fischer, 36 and launched into a thriving career as a bank vice president and horse breeder; center Len Hauss, 34 and bothered by knee problems; defensive end Ron McDole, 37, and tight end Jerry Smith, 33, who was supplanted as a starter this year by Jean Fugett.

Veteran wide receiver Charley Taylor, sidelined with an injury for the entire campaign, will try a comeback but the NFL's record-setting pass catcher will be 35 next season.

Even thornier is Allen's two-quarterback problem involving 37-year-old

George Allen

Bill Kilmer and his younger challenger, Joe Theismann. Kilmer explosively declared at one point this season he wanted to play elsewhere next year but apparently is having second thoughts. The 27-year-old Theismann, who at one point took over Kilmer's starting role but then was relegated again to the bench, is in a "play me or trade me" frame of mind.

"I DON'T BELIEVE I can play here under ths same circumstances as I did last year," the former Notre Dame star said after the Minnesota playoff in which his only duty was to hold on field goal and extra point attempts.

Allen acknowledges he'll have to exercise his full persuasive powers to pacify the two rivals and keep them for 1977.

"I'd like to have them both," the coach says. "It's a sensitive thing and I appreciate both of their feelings. I understand what both have gone through."

Money more than pride is involved in the case of running back Mike Thomas, who rushed for more than 1,000 yards in his second season in pro football. Thomas, in his second year of a contract signed as a rookie out of Nevada-Las Vegas, was paid $28,000 for a season in which he outgained such high-salaried free agent acquisitions as John Riggins and Calvin Hill.

HE AND HIS agent, Guy Draper, are demanding a substantial pay hike and so is promising wide receiver Frank Grant, another Draper client whose option year is coming up.

For the first time since coming to Washington, Allen has a second round draft pick but on the basis of past history may trade it if the NFL finds a legal way to hold the annual selection of college stars.

Should the federal court decision ruling the system illegal force the draft to be abandoned, creating a free market for the top college talent, the Redskins may well have to go into an open bidding war short of chips.

Young Notre Dame, Penn State collide

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Dan Devine is worried that his Notre Dame team may have been "sitting around too long," while Penn State's Joe Paterno says he's concerned that his team might be "working too hard."

The coaches for the young Irish and young Nittany Lions are hoping that their teams reach their peak physically and mentally when they clash tonight in the Gator Bowl. Kickoff for the nationally televised game (ABC) is 8:10 p.m.

Penn State arrived in Jacksonville with a week's solid preparation already under its belt and upon arriving here last Monday Paterno said the team had the best preparation of any of his bowl teams.

But Devine was singing another tune.

"WE'VE HAD LESS work at home than I've ever done before a bowl game," he said. "This was because of exams. So I'm working a little harder at the bowl site than I have in the past."

Both coaches have winning records in post-season bowl games — Paterno is 5-2-1 and Devine, 4-2. Among Paterno's victories was a 10-3 win over a Devine-coached Missouri squad in the 1970 Orange Bowl.

Penn State will be making its fourth appearance in the Gator Bowl.

It's the first appearance for the Irish in the Gator Bowl.

Both teams are young and strong and the game could be dominated by their defensive squads.

"We've got to play good defense and not let them have the big play in their passing game," Paterno said. "They've got a good passing game."

Devine said, "Joe and his staff don't give you anything. When you've got sound coaching like Penn State has you'll find a tough defense. It should be tough to move the ball. It probably will be a low scoring game."

Real Madrid takes own cage tourney

MADRID — Spanish champion Real Madrid knocked off Tennessee 113-103 Sunday night to win its own Christmas round-robin basketball tournament for the ninth time in the 12-year history of the competition.

Tennessee led by as much as 10 points throughout much of the first half. But Real Madrid, led by American players John Coughran and Walter Szczerbiak, closed the gap and led at the half by 57-53.

The American college squad struggled gamely in the second half and took a 93-92 lead with five and a half minutes remaining. But Madrid, with four of its five players carrying four fouls apiece and Cristobal firing in goals from mid-range, spurted away for the victory.

The leading scorer for Tennessee was Mike Jackson with 35 points. Bernard King, who poured in 55 on Saturday night, could not maintain that pace, but managed to finish the three-game tournament with a total of 108 to be the tourney's overall high scorer.

Ram veteran Olsen takes final bow

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. — Los Angeles defensive tackle Merlin Olsen played his final National Football League game Sunday in the Rams' 24-13 National Football Conference championship loss to the Minnesota Vikings.

The 15-year veteran made three tackles in the game and had one of four sacks on Minnesota quarterback Fran Tarkenton.

Olsen made a quick departure from the locker room after the game and was not available to newsmen. Olsen, 36, holds an NFL record for appearing in 14 consecutive Pro Bowls and ranked third in Rams' history by playing in 208 games.

He is a former Maxwell Trophy winner at Utah State and twice was named Los Angeles' Most Valuable Player. Olsen was named to the all-time Rams team in 1970.

Ranger goalie to go under knife

NEW YORK (UPI) — New York Ranger goalie John Davidson will undergo surgery Monday at Lenox Hill Hospital here to correct torn cartilage in his right knee.

Davidson underwent an arthogram of his knee Sunday and surgery was indicated.

Davidson injured his knee Dec. 12 against the Montreal Canadians and was expected to be sidelined for 10 days. The Rangers said he will now be out of action indefinitely.

Doug Soetaert was brought up from New Haven at the time of Davidson's injury to back up No. 2 goaltender Gilles Gratton.

Black Hawks beat Colorado, 5-3

A pair of goals in the second period by J.P. Bordeleau allowed the Chicago Black Hawks to skate past the Colorado Rockies, 5-3, in a divisional contest at the Stadium Sunday evening.

The victory was the first for Chicago under new head coach Bill White, who's debut was spoiled last Thursday. The triumph was also the Hawks 11th against 20 losses and five ties this season, allowing them to retain their slim hold on second place in the Con Smythe race of the NHL.

Stan Mikita racked up an unassisted goal in the final minute of play to ice the contest.

Chicago led going into both the second and third periods. Alain Daigle put the Hawks up 2-1 with 12:14 to go inh he opening stanza, assisted by Stan Mikita and Keith Magnuson.

Dick Redmond had tallied Chicago's initial goal early with help from Cliff Koroll but Chuck Arnason got it back for the Rockies a little more than a minute later.

In the second session Gary Corrado and Nelson Pyatt slammed home shots for Colorado, lifting them into a temporary 3-2 advantage. Bordeleau tied the game and then put his team on top a short while later with his 10th and 11th goals of the season.

Future

Allen ponders tomorrow with Redskins

by SAM FOGG

WASHINGTON (UPI) — George Allen did something this weekend he prefers not to do — spend Christmas with his family — and weigh the future with the Washington Redskins.

The 54-year-old head coach is a perfectly solid husband and father but he has always declared he'd rather be at work, coaching a Super Bowl contender in the playoffs during the holidays, than watching rival teams play on television.

The Minnesota Vikings confined him to family quarters this year by eliminating the Redskins 35-20 in the first round of the playoffs. The defeat also stirred a flurry of speculation that Allen might not return in 1977 to complete the last season of his seven-year contract.

BUT REDSKINS president Edward Bennett Williams announced after conferring with majority stockholder Jack Kent Cooke that Allen will be offered an extension of his contract and a pay raise. His present salary is estimated at about $150,000 annually, including fringe benefits.

"He has done a superb job of coaching for the last six years," Williams said of Allen, who has compiled a 58-25-1 record with Washington and taken the team to the playoffs in five of the six seasons.

"I've been happy in Washington . . . We've got a good football team and I think we can continue to win," Allen, one of four active NFL coaches with a lifetime record of more than 100 victories, said in anticipation of negotiations.

But after a 10-4 season, Allen and his aides face problems of major dimensions.

FIRST. Washington's "Over-the-Hill Gang" will be another year older next season. Wide receiver Roy Jefferson is expected to call it a career at age 33.

At least five of Allen's seasoned veterans are weighing the pros and cons of retirement — all - pro linebacker Chris Hanburger, 35, and the owner of a new auto agency; cornerback Pat Fischer, 36 and launched into a thriving career as a bank vice president and horse breeder; center Len Hauss, 34 and bothered by knee problems; defensive end Ron McDole, 37, and tight end Jerry Smith, 33, who was supplanted as a starter this year by Jean Fugett.

Veteran wide receiver Charley Taylor, sidelined with an injury for the entire campaign, will try a comeback but the NFL's record-setting pass catcher will be 35 next season.

Even thornier is Allen's two-quarterback problem involving 37-year-old

George Allen

Bill Kilmer and his younger challenger, Joe Theismann. Kilmer explosively declared at one point this season he wanted to play elsewhere next year but apparently is having second thoughts. The 27-year-old Theismann, who at one point took over Kilmer's starting role but then was relegated again to the bench, is in a "play me or trade me" frame of mind.

"I DON'T BELIEVE I can play here under ths same circumstances as I did last year," the former Notre Dame star said after the Minnesota playoff in which his only duty was to hold on field goal and extra point attempts.

Allen acknowledges he'll have to exercise his full persuasive powers to pacify the two rivals and keep them for 1977.

"I'd like to have them both," the coach says. "It's a sensitive thing and I appreciate both of their feelings. I understand what both have gone through."

Money more than pride is involved in the case of running back Mike Thomas, who rushed for more than 1,000 yards in his second season in pro football. Thomas, in his second year of a contract signed as a rookie out of Nevada-Las Vegas, was paid $28,000 for a season in which he outgained such high-salaried free agent acquisitions as John Riggins and Calvin Hill.

HE AND HIS agent, Guy Draper, are demanding a substantial pay hike and so is promising wide receiver Frank Grant, another Draper client whose option year is coming up.

For the first time since coming to Washington, Allen has a second round draft pick but on the basis of past history may trade it if the NFL finds a legal way to hold the annual selection of college stars.

Should the federal court decision ruling the system illegal force the draft to be abandoned, creating a free market for the top college talent, the Redskins may well have to go into an open bidding war short of chips.

Tennessee led by as much as 10 points throughout much of the first half. But Real Madrid, led by American players John Coughran and Walter Szczerbiak, closed the gap and led at the half by 57-53.

Black Hawks beat Colorado, 5-3

A pair of goals in the second period by J.P. Bordeleau allowed the Chicago Black Hawks to skate past the Colorado Rockies, 5-3, in a divisional contest at the Stadium Sunday evening.

The victory was the first for Chicago under new head coach Bill White, who's debut was spoiled last Thursday. The triumph was also the Hawks 11th against 20 losses and five ties this season, allowing them to retain their slim hold on second place in the Con Smythe race of the NHL.

Stan Mikita racked up an unassisted goal in the final minute of play to ice the contest.

Chicago led going into both the second and third periods. Alain Daigle put the Hawks up 2-1 with 12:14 to go inh he opening stanza, assisted by Stan Mikita and Keith Magnuson.

Dick Redmond had tallied Chicago's initial goal early with help from Cliff Koroll but Chuck Arnason got it back for the Rockies a little more than a minute later.

In the second session Gary Corrado and Nelson Pyatt slammed home shots for Colorado, lifting them into a temporary 3-2 advantage. Bordeleau tied the game and then put his team on top a short while later with his 10th and 11th goals of the season.

Area needs junior hockey teams

The story about former Schaumburg High student Doug Olson coincidentally appeared on your sports page the same day as an article about a new junior hockey team being formed in the area. The reason Olson had to go to Canada to get a scholarship was simply that there are no junior teams around here. It's about time.

CONGRATS TO BRIAN

My congratulations come a little late but I still would like to extend them to Brias Allsmiller of Buffalo Grove High School for breaking the all-time scoring record held for so long by Palatine graduate Ron Kozlicki.

A lot of people thought the record was untouchable as it was set by a super player of another era and I was one of those who believed it would never be broken. I knew Ron and played basketball with him for a while and he was a great guy. He's out of the area now, but I'm sure he'd agree with me that records are made to be broken and he'd be one of the first to congratulate Brian Allsmiller if he could do so in person.

LAST LETTER

I promise that this is my last letter to the Fans Forum (at least on this subject), but I feel that I must respond to the letter from "A Bear Fan" from Mount Prospect which appeared in your column last Friday (Fans Forum, Dec. 17).

He (whoever he is) said that Walter Payton's job was to run the ball and therefore he shouldn't be worried or concerned about getting injured. That was part of his job and he knew what he was getting into. Well, that's no reason to risk injury if it can be avoided. If a team has a safe lead, the first-stringers are often removed from the game early in practically any sport you can name. If a team is too far behind to rally, the same thing happens. So why coudln't the Bears be content to let Payton run his normal amount of carries — do his job — and not be concerned about the rushing title?

The letter-writer also said he thought the Bears had other bona fide stars besides Payton. He mentioned, among other more ridiculous suggestions, that Wally Chambers and Waymond Bryant were stars. Chambers is a good player, no doubt, but he's not in the same class with Payton. Neither is Bryant.

Finally, he puts a rap on Bob Thomas, who lost a couple of games for the Bears because he was unfortunate enough to hit the upright a couple of times. I feel Thomas is a good kicker who will be around helping the Bears for a long time to come.

Akers sees bright side to 41-7 loss

TEMPE, Ariz. (UPI) Barry Switzer naturally saw a lot of good coming out of Oklahoma's 41-7 Fiesta Bowl decision over Wyoming Christmas Day, but, surprisingly, Cowboy coach Fred Akers also saw a bright side.

"I think the lack of maturity was evident," Akers said about his team, "but this is such a young football team that it won't be the last time folks hear about the Cowboys."

Switzer said the "carry-over factor" would be a help for the 1977 season, but added, "The fact that we have so many players coming back is really what's super."

Akers will not have a chance to continue development of the Cowboys, who were only 2-9 in his rookie 1975 season but 8-4 this year. He is leaving Wyoming for Texas where he succeeds Darrell Royal and will have the annual task of facing the sooners in the fierce Oklahoma-Texas rivalry.

'Survival of the fittest'

Pain plays big part in pro game

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — There was admiration in the voice of Dr. Robert Kerlan, the noted Los Angeles orthopedic surgeon.

The subject was pain and man's ability to withstand it. Kerlan, the Los Angeles Rams' physician, didn't come out and say it but it was obvious how much he marveled at the players in the National Football League.

"To get to the professional level in football," he said, "you're dealing with a group of athletes who have a very high pain threshold. They've already eliminated the ones with a low pain threshold.

"IT'S SORT OF a survival of the fittest. The guy with the average pain threshold or a low one couldn't stay in there. Even with the equipment they use today, you have to be a man.

"I don't really think most of the guys playing football really know they're hurting. Hurting is a subjective situation. Therefore, if you have a high pain threshold, you're not hurting because you don't feel it."

Kerlan, 54, began his affiliation with the Rams when Carroll Rosenbloom assumed control of the club in 1972. He continued to talk about pro football as he finished a bowl of soup at his office in Inglewood, Calif.

HIS HOURS are crowded and interviews have to be fitted in at lunch time.

"There are times," Kerlan said, "when it's strictly the amount of discomfort that's keeping the guy from playing and not the injury itself. When the guy says, 'I'm having too much discomfort,' there's no way to change that.

"Then there's another player with the same problem. That gets down to two things, not just one. The threshold of pain between individuals, which is certainly different, and motivation.

"But no matter how well motivated a guy is, if he has a low threshold of pain he's not going to be able to get in there."

KERLAN HAS been in the sports medicine business for 25 years. His patients include former NBA greats Elgin Baylor, all-time winning jockey Bill Shoemaker and former Los Angeles Dodgers' superstar Sandy Koufax.

He points out that his profession has improved.

"I think the care has become very sophisticated today," he said. "I think there are more players taken out for the season now because there are doctors who are trained to take care of athletic injuries.

"These dctors realize that in order for the athlete to have the longest span of playing time in his career, they sometimes take athletes out for an entire year. You don't see a player treated for something and then put back into the lineup and then taken out again after two or three weeks."

A NINE-LETTERMAN at his Hitken, Minn., high school, he had had his share of pain, too.

While studying at the University of Southern California Medical School, he found out he had rheumatoid spondylitis, a form of arthritis.

Kerlan notes that out of 100 persons there might be 100 different pain thresholds.

"Say you do have 100 individuals in all age groups, male and female," he said, "and you line them up in a parking lot all blind folded. Then you sneak up behind them and stick a needle into the calf of their legs.

"Of that 100, you might have three who won't feel it, there are three that might have to be removed to the hospital because they're in shock and you're going to have 94 somewhere in between."

ALL THE LATEST models in motor homes — including the L'Espirit from Travco — will be on display at the Chicago Boat & Sports Show, Jan. 5-9 at McCormick Place. Over 310 units and 90 brand names will offer a complete assortment for the most discriminating buyer.

Variety of RVs at Chicago show

Finding the recreational vehicle best suited to your needs and pocketbook among the hundreds on display at the Chicago Boat, Sports & RV Show won't require the wisdom of Solomon or the touch of Midas.

A customer ought to know, however, the types available, what each unit offers, and their price tags.

With over 310 units and 90 brand names to choose from this year's Chicago Show, Jan. 5-9 at McCormick Place, becomes the largest RV show in the country.

UNITS ON display will run the gamut offered by RV manufacturers — motorhomes, travel trailers, camping trailers and truck campers.

—First there are the motorhomes, self-powered units designed to provide complete living facilities for use while camping and on the highway. There are three basic types of motorhomes; the conventional or "class A" motorhome; the van camper or mini-motorhome; and the van conversion.

Topping the price list is the conventional type which can cost between $10,000 and $35,000 but provides the ultimate in space and luxury. The mini-motorhomes are chopped van assemblies built on truck frames with the front section retained to provide the driver compartment and are priced somewhat less at $7,500 to $15,000.

—The increasingly-popular van conversions are regular vans that have been customized with a bunk, galley and/or dinette. A camping vehicle that can be used every day of the year, van conversions cost anywhere from $6,000 to $11,000.

—TRAVEL trailers are of two types: the conventional, rectangular-shaped unit constructed of aluminum of molded fiberglass over wall studs, and the fifth-wheel trailer.

The latter is similar to the conventional trailer except that the forward section is raised, allowing a bi-level floor plan, and is usually towed by a pickup truck with a fifth wheel mounted in the truck bed. Either type can cost between $1,000 to $18,000 depending on size and accommodations.

—Another popular RV type is the camping trailer, or "pop-up." Dis tinguished by its folding walls, this low-profile, lightweight unit can be towed by most cars and requires a minimum of time and effort to set up. This, and its relatively low price tag, (from $700 up) make the camping trailer an ideal first unit for the beginning camper.

—Truck campers are units ranging from 6-12 feet in length which are secured to a pickup truck and come with a variety of self-containment equipment and cost between $1,000 and $5,000.

Every type of RV unit will be shown at the 44th annual Chicago Boat, Sports & RV Show. Among the 90 brand names represented will be: Travco, Coachmen, Allegro, Winnebago, Midas, Tioga, Bonanza, Hop Cap, TEC, Royals International, Prowler, Swiss Colony, Terry, Taurus, Rockwood, Venture and Starcraft.

Marriott opens slope for skiers

Marriott's Lincolnshire Resort's ski slope is inaugurating Chicagoland's closest-in ski instructional facility with a special 1976 Grand Opening offer of two lift tickets for the price of one.

The slope, designed specifically for GLM (Graduated Lenght Method) ski instruction has been termed "the finest facility for GLM instruction I've seen," by Clif Taylor, originator of the method.

The ski slope will be in operation sessions daily. The morning session is from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m., (9 a.m. Friday and Saturday); while the evening session is from 5 p.m. until 10 p.m. (11 p.m. Friday and Saturday). Lift tickets, (good for an entire session) are priced at $4 Monday through the Friday morning session and $5 Friday P.M. session through Sunday A.M. session. The Sunday evening session lift tickets are $3. There is a special season lift ticket available for $125 per ticket.

A LARGE inventory of ski rental equipment is available, including Reichle boots, Tonic poles and Shakespeare Elan 3, 4 and 5 foot skis (as well as 65cc skis for children). Spademan bindings, which are clearly established as the safest bindings in rental use, are used exclusively. Rental is $6 per day for complete equipment and insurance against equipment breakage.

The Lincolnshire ski slope features a Poma-Lift . . . the best available for beginners, according to Taylor. In addition, Headco snow making equipment insures an excellent base throughout the season.

A variety of lesson plans are available for area residents, including a large number of group lesson plans, as well as, private and semi-private instruction. Private lessons are $14 per hour, while semi-private lessons are $8 per hour. Equipment rental and lift tickets are not included in the private and semi-private lesson rates, but are included in the group rates.

GROUP LESSON plans and packages available for the lincolnshire season include the Mid-Day Special for $40, Evening Sessions for $45, Accelerated Program at $50, the Weekender for $60 and the Holiday Program for $60.
